Friary Warned On Lotteries

EASTON, Pa. (AP)—Dist. Atty. Andrew L. Herster said Thursday an order of Franciscan Fathers had been running a treasury balance lottery.

He said the lottery has been ended and that no charges would be filed.

The Northampton County official declined at first to name the organization involved, but it later was identified as the St. Francis Friary and Retreat Home in neighboring Bethlehem Township.

A spokesman for the Friary said the lottery had been operated to help pay debts of about $750,000 growing out of the recent construction of the retreat.

McSparran Raps Frills On Schools

TEMPLE, Pa. (AP) — J. Collins McSparran, candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, said Thursday night Pennsylvania needs "more sound instruction and fewer costly and unnecessary frills" in its schools.

The state is 'supposed to be building schoolhouses, not palaces," he said.

McSparran, who is on leave from his job as master of the State Grange to campaign for the GOP nomination, also declared—in a speech prepared for a rally staged by the Muhlenberg-Laureldale-Temple Republican Club — that the state could save millions of tax dollars in its education program.

Supreme Court Jurist To Retire

WASHINGTON (AP)—Supreme Court Justice Charles E. Whittaker is retiring at 61 on doctor's orders.

The jurist, who mounted the high bench five years ago this month, said he is exhausted.

His retirement, effective April 1, was announced Thursday by President Kennedy.

Kennedy told his news conference he would name a successor shortly, but he declined to be drawn into any discussion of whom he will choose. It will be his first appointment to the Supreme Court.

Jury Summons Bank Employes

SCRANTON, Pa. (AP)—Several employes of the first National Bank of Exeter, where a $450,000 shortage was uncovered in January, were summoned to testify before the federal grand jury Thursday.

U.S. Attorney Bernard J. Brown had no comment on the panel's deliberations. From another source, however, it was learned that the jury is likely to be concerned with criminal charges stemming from the shortage.

In a partial report to court Thursday the grand jury indicted John N. Sabatini, Avoca, Luzerne County, for alleged forgery of U.S. treasury checks.

Atty. Gen. Says Gamblers Pay

WASHINGTON (AP) — Atty. Gen. Robert F. Kennedy told senators Thursday he has strong evidence that major public officials in communities in the South, East and West "are on the payroll of big-time gamblers."

He testified at a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing in support of a new wiretap measure that he said has been carefully drawn to strike a balance between the right of privacy and the needs of law enforcement.

Talking with newsmen after the hearing, Kennedy declined to name the communities in which he believes political leaders have been corrupted by the underworld —or even to say how many he had in mind.

'Gemini' Space Craft Unveiled

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (AP)—A full-scale model of the Gemini space craft designed to take two astronauts into orbit for a week or more was unveiled Thursday. It could play a major role in manned flights to the moon.

The Gemini is designed as an operational craft rather than a a research vehicle.

The wooden and glass mock-up is larger but quite similar in appearance to the bell-shaped Mercury capsule used in America's manned space shots. The Mercury has only one-day orbital capabilities.

JFK Asks New Office Of Science

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Kennedy moved Thursday to establish a new office of science and technology to coordinate multiple federal activities in these fields.

His proposal was sent to Congress as a statutory governmental reorganization plan and, under terms of the law, will become effective automatically in 60 days unless vetoed by the House or Senate.

At News Conference:

JFK Discusses Tax Bill, Berlin, Politics, N-Tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Kennedy strode directly into the battle over his tax bill Thursday and Democratic forces in the House presented him with a big victory a few hours later.

The President, at his news conference, disparaged Republicans for opposing the measure which calls for new incentives to businesses to modernize their plants, and for withholding income taxes on dividend and interest payments.

When the showdown came late in the day, House GOP forces lost 225 to 190 in a move to strike out those major provisions. A second, 219-196 rollcall then passed the bill and sent it to the Senate.

Kennedy insisted the bill would spread the tax burden fairly.

Kennedy put himself smack on the firing line at a news conference, which also produced news of the retirement of Supreme Court Justice Charles Evans Whittaker, bleak prospects for a nuclear test ban, an appeal for state legislatures to give city voters equal representation and a word of appreciation to the Soviets for proceeding "with care" in the Berlin crisis.

The President opened his conference with a vigorous argument for his tax measure — jabbing away with his forefinger in gestures of emphasis. Then he announced Whittaker's retirement and served notice that the United States will accept no nuclear-test agreement that doesn't provide for inspections.

Whittaker must leave the court after nearly five years on doctor's orders, Kennedy disclosed. He said a successor would be named shortly, but declined to discuss any possible appointees.

Immediately after the conference, the White House issued a statement elaborating Kennedy's position on nuclear test controls. It was generally a reiteration of this country's demand for international inspections, which the Soviet Union rejects, to check against violations. And it acknowledged that "we seem to be at a real impasse" with the Soviets.

Refutes Charges

Responding to a question about the Supreme Court decision entitling federal tribunals to hear cases challenging the apportionment of seats in state legislatures, Kennedy said there was no sense to the charge leveled by some Southerners that the court overstepped its bounds.

Kennedy supported the argument that city voters lack proportionate representation in legislatures that don't apportion seats according to population.

"To have each vote count equally is, it seems to me, basic to the successful operation of a democracy," Kennedy said.

Discusses Berlin

On the continuing crisis scene, Kennedy said that to push too hard in Berlin "would lead to all sorts of hazards." Maneuvering with care could bring about a happy solution, he said, though none has developed.

Unquestionably a candidate for re-election in 1964, Kennedy was asked if: 1. He would seek the presidency if he had it to do all over again; and 2. if he'd recommend the job to others.

"Well," he replied, "the answer is first, 'Yes,' and the second is 'no.' I wouldn't recommend it, at least for a while."

'Cleanup Brigade' Planned

PRELIMINARY arrangements have been made for a "Pocono Cleanup Brigade" to travel to Long Island Beach, N. J., to help that community clean up after the devastating storm which hit the east coast several weeks ago. A tentative date of Sunday, April 8, has been set.

The intent of the brigade is to repay stricken communities for the assistance that was rendered to the Stroudsburg area following the devastating floods in 1955. Long Beach Island was one of the worst hit in the recent storm.

Volunteers will be needed for the job, and Herman Meinhart, president of the Monroe County Firemen's Federation is temporary chairman. As soon as committees and other arrangements are formulated, definite plans will be announced.

Snow And Floods Strike In Midwest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A SPRING storm flung road blocking snow across northeast North Dakota Thursday and scattered a mixture of snow and rain on flood-plagued Iowa and Nebraska.

Cold air pushing into the nation's midsection nipped a spell of balmy spring weather but eased flood threats in some sections by slowing the runoff from melting snow.

Snow Blocks Roads

The new snow ranged up to eight inches in northeast North Dakota, blocking several roads.

A half-inch of snow fell on Norfolk, Neb., where flood waters from the Northfork River receded slowly after washing over 100 residential blocks and much of the business area of the city of 13,200 population.

The flood threat was improving generally in eastern Nebraska, where several hundred persons have been driven from their homes.

Flood Dangers

But flood dangers mounted rapidly in scattered cities in Iowa. The Floyd River rolled into the communities of Le Mars and Hinton and the Little Sioux River overflowed into Cherokee north of Sioux City in northwestern Iowa.

At Sioux City, a city of more than 89,000 population, 175 families already have been evacuated, with the flood crest still to come.

Cherokee was under four feet of water in spots and 75 families were evacuated there.

Community Evacuated

The eastern half of Hinton was evacuated and the National Guard was called out.

An eastward moving cold front stretched from Michigan into Texas at midday.

Snow fell from the eastern Dakotas into Iowa and western Wisconsin. Snow flurries were noted from Montana into northern Wyoming and along the eastern slopes of the Colorado Rockies.

Skies were mostly sunny from the Pacific states into the plateau region.

Fisher, Out Of Hospital, In Seclusion

NEW YORK (AP)—Singer Eddie Fisher left a hospital Thursday and sought seclusion, amid reports that both his marriage and his health were broken. Screen star Elizabeth Taylor telephoned from Rome to ask about her husband's condition, but talked to his doctor and not to him.

Published reports that Fisher entered Gracie Square Hospital Monday suffering from a nervous breakdown were denied by various of his spokesmen. They said he had gone in for a rest and left early Thursday to stay with friends, who were not identified.

"The fact that he has left the hospital shows it's ridiculous," said one spokesman of the reports. "No responsible doctor would ever permit a patient who was in that condition to leave the place."

Nevertheless, Fisher's manager, Milton Blackstone, refused requests from newsmen to interview Fisher. His excuse was that Fisher still "is resting."

Weather More Like Summer

THE CALENDAR says it's Spring, but yesterday's weather was definitely Summer-like.

The temperature zoomed above the 60-degree mark early in the morning and reached a high of 78 on The Daily Record's thermometer at 2:30 p.m.

It was the warmest day of the year. Coats were discarded, shorts made their appearance on Main St. and a pleasant languor seemed to prevail in most stores and offices.

The Weather Bureau at Scranton-Wilkes-Barre Airport at Avoca reported a high for the day of 76—eight lower than the record for the date, 84, set in 1905.

The forecast for today calls for considerable cloudiness with occasional showers and mild, with a high from 66 to 72.

Guido Assumes Presidency Of Argentina In Surprise Action

Deposed Frondizi Is Banished To Island

BUENOS AIRES (AP)—Senate President Jose Maria Guido stunned the armed forces Thursday by suddenly stepping to the presidency of Argentina without notifying the rebellious military leaders who deposed and banished President Arturo Frondizi.

The new president calmy dismissed speculation that the commanders might throw him out.

There was a tense, confused interval of nine hours between the exiling of Frondizi on a naval island and Guido's unprecedented and almost private oath-taking ceremony in the Supreme Court.

Sudden Action

Guido's sudden action — after hours of refusing military pleas that he take the office — touched off a wave of anger among the top brass, creating an impression that he might not be allowed to wield executive power.

There were rumors about that Gen. Raul Poggi, army commander in chief and a leader of the bloodless coup that ended Frondizi's four-year regime early Thursday, had sworn himself in to replace Guido.

But in a premidnight news conference, Guido was a picture of cool confidence, declaring: "At no moment did Gen. Poggi assume the presidency."

First In Line

As senate president, Guido was first in line for the job: the vice presidency has been vacant.

What stunned the military was Guido's lightning change of mind. Throughout the day there were indications the generals and admirals were urging him to take office to preserve the impression of constitutional procedure. But he had appeared reluctant.

Then he suddenly took the oath before the Supreme Court with no advance notice and went off to Government House, where he plunged into a round of conferences to push ahead with plans for a new government.

Hours before, Frondizi embraced his tearful wife and then was flown off to an isolated navy island in the River Plate estuary for detention.

Call For Elections

As the transfer of office occurred, Guido, a lawyer and member of Frondizi's Intransigent Radical party, said he was ready to call for elections.

With a new president in office, the military rulers opened a way to solve their No. 1 problem left by Frondizi's ouster—the formation of constitutional government that would avoid outright military rule.

But their second big problem—how to deal with the 2.6-million voters who still cling to ex-dictator Juan D. Peron who dogged the days of Frondizi throughout his four years of rule—remained.

Behind the Peronist peril lies the grave economic sickness inherited from a decade of Peronist dictatorship which Frondizi's austerity policies fell short of curing.

Reaction Pondered

The reaction to the coup by the believers in Peronism—backed by some 100,000 underground Communists and Castroites—could be violent. So could be the effect on Argentina's angry students who fear another military dictatorship may try to control their thinking.

In a long communique explaining their action, the military leaders declared they were shelving Frondizi because he lacked the moral and political fiber to unite the nation again and lead it against the great social disturbances threatened by resurgent Peronists.

Frondizi Arrested

Frondizi was arrested by a naval officer at his suburban residence in the early morning as a crowd outside sang the national anthem. He was rushed to an airport in a five-car caravan and put on an air force plane for the 30-mile hop to Martin Garcia Island. There he was imprisoned in one of the comfortable houses of a naval officer.

Mother, 4 Children Escape As Night Fire Levels Home

RAGING flames drove a widowed mother and her four children from their home, near Canadensis, yesterday at 2:55 a.m. The family escaped without injury, but the house was a total loss.

Mrs. Ethel Bonitz and her children were asleep but were awakened by the smell of smoke in the house. When they got out of bed the entire first floor of the two-story, frame house was engulfed in flames.

They made their exit through a bedroom window onto the front porch roof and then to a tree they could reach from the roof and down to the ground 14 feet below.

Harold Pugh, a neighbor, saw the fire and called the Barrett Township Fire Co. When the firemen arrived the fire was out of control. The first step was to establish a water wall between the blaze and the Pugh home about 75 feet from the burning house to prevent it from catching fire.

The Bonitz family lost everything in the home and were able to escape with only the clothing on their bodies.

Monroe County Chapter American Red Cross was notified late yesterday afternoon of the family's plight. They are now receiving donations for the family. Articles needed are all types of household furnishings, linens, and clothing.

The sizes for the three girls are as follows: Dress size 10 chubby, shoe size 4; dress size 14, shoe size 7, and dress size 16, shoe size 8. Mrs. Bonitz wears a dress size 16 and size 7. The son wears size 16 clothing and shoe size six and one-half.

In the Barrett area articles for the family may be taken to the Canadensis Methodist Church where they will be stored for the family until they move into another house Sunday.

People in other parts of the area wishing to donate clothing or other articles should telephone Monroe County Chapter American Red Cross at HA 1-0660. Arrangements will be made to deliver the articles to the family.

Fire Chief David Blitz said late last night that the cause of the fire that gutted the home three miles north of Canadensis, on Route 290, was a faulty oil burner.

He estimated the damage at $22,000 to the house and approximately $4,000 for the contents. He will continue his investigation today.

Geneva Delegates Mull Over Preamble On Disarmament

GENEVA (AP)—The 17-nation disarmament conference agreed Thursday on a procedure for drafting a preamble for a disarmament treaty but the Western powers expressed some concern about the attitude taken by the Communists.

In British eyes, at least, Soviet Deputy Foreign Minister Valerian A. Zorin seemed determined to plug the Russian disarmament line from first to last, with little consideration for the views of the non-Communist nations. The Americans took a more hopeful view following a three-hour session.

Work On Preamble

Specifically, the delegates instructed their cochairmen—American Ambassador Arthur H. Dean and Zorin—to work out agreed language for a preamble and report back by the middle of next week if possible.

Leaders of the other delegations will submit comments and suggestions of their own by Monday morning and these ideas will be considered by Dean and Zorin. The co-chairmen also may call in various delegates to help them in their work.

The conference now has only one draft preamble before it—the one submitted by Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko three weeks ago as part of a complete Russian disarmament treaty.

Arms Proposal

The United States has presented a series of specific arms cut proposals but these are not in draft treaty form. There has been no firm indication when an American draft will be introduced.

Zorin showed some willingness to accept additions to his document. He agreed the preamble should include broad references to:

The obligation of states to live up to their international agreements and refrain from any steps which might aggravate their relations with other countries, plus the need to couple actual measures of disarmament with procedures for peaceful settlement of disputes.

Delegates Divided

But informants said Zorin took a stiffer attitude toward a proposal of more substance from British Minister of State Joseph Godber, who urged specific reference in the preamble to establishment of a United Nations peace force to maintain world order when national arms and armies have been abolished. Zorin took the position that now was not the time to consider this idea.

Unemployment Down, Relief Rolls Up In Pennsylvania

HARRISBURG (AP) — Though Pennsylvania's total number of unemployed has diminished more than 20 per cent in the past year, the number of persons on relief has increased.

The situation, recorded in statistics released Thursday by the state's Public Welfare and Labor and Industry Departments, is an apparent paradox, since relief rolls in the past trended to reflect the Commonwealth's employment situation.

Total unemployment in February this year was 426,000—down 118,000 from a year ago. But the total number of persons dependent on relief in the same month was 447,070 this year compared to 441,270 last year.

Relief rolls and unemployment totals overlap only partially. Persons counted as dependent on relief include children, the blind and the aged.

One explanation offered was that automation in industry has resulted in a permanent hard core of so-called "marginal employes" who will never be taken back with the organizations which once employed them.

Another factor cited in some areas is that the total relief figure has been upheld by a steady migration into Pennsylvania and other northern states by unskilled southern labor.

Total unemployment dwindled to 400,000 in March, of which more than 207,000 workers on unemployment compensation. The March total was 105,000 below the figure for the same month a year ago. The total number of persons on unemployment compensation was down 91,861 from a year ago.

The number of persons on old age assistance was down about 1,000 from February a year ago, while the number of those receiving assistance for the blind was about the same.

Almost all of the increase in the relief rolls came in aid to families with dependent children and general assistance—a total of 359,511 this year compared to 352,640 last year.

Officials Back JFK's Public Works Plan

WASHINGTON (AP)—Two governors, a couple of mayors and the president of the AFL-CIO backed President Kennedy's $2.6 billion public works program Thursday.

They urged the House Public Works Committee to approve Kennedy's request for an immediate $600-million-plus standby authority to spend an additional $2 billion if a recession threatens.

AFL-CIO President George Meany said a depression this fall is not outside the realm of possibility and if it comes "it will start with 5 million unemployed and go on up."

Meany said the President's proposal for immediate funds would provide jobs directly and indirectly for about 250,000 workers.

Other witnesses included Gov.s David Lawrence of Pennsylvania and John Swainson of Michigan and Mayors Frank P. Celeste of Lakewood, Ohio, and James H. J. Tate of Philadelphia.

Kennedy's plan would speed up federal grants to states and localities on a 50-50 matching basis. It also would provide loans for areas unable to furnish the matching funds, and open up new categories of public works not now eligible for federal grants.

Lawrence said Pennsylvania has had an average of 10½ per cent unemployment since the 1958 recession.

"It is imperative, from our standpoint, that some positive federal action should be taken to help us in the effort to revitalize the economy of the state," Lawrence said.

"We have done an extraordinary job, thus far, on programs of our own—but there is enormous work still before us and I believe the federal government can play an important role in getting it done," he added.

Lenten Meditation

By Rev. George Weinland
Retired Moravian Minister

'LOVEST THOU ME?"

DURING the season of lent it is good for us to search out the spiritual meaning for us in the words and acts of our Lord. We can grow in understanding, in spiritial depth, and in broadening of character as we think on these things and apply them in daily life.

After grief stricken days following his denial that he even knew Jesus, Peter met his risen Saviour. What shame and confusion must have covered him as he met the one whom he had basely denied.

How he must have been pierced to the heart by his Saviour's look and the question "Lovest thou me more than these?" In this question Christ was helping Peter to come back to his position as one of His disciples.

In this question we can see the Master's call to our hearts to enter a richer, fuller life.

We can well take this question to heart. As we meditate on call to spiritual growth the same piercing question comes to us, "Lovest thou me more than these?

It is difficult to know what or who "these" refers to in the words of the risen Christ. The disciple was not being asked to entirely abandon his love for his friends, his family or his place among his fellow men.

Peter was being asked to show the reality and depth of his loyalty to his Lord and Master. He was being asked to take a definite step forward and grow in the strength of his devotion to the eternal things in life.

A love for Christ does not exclude from our lives love to others or of the good and true. In fact the devotion to Christ gives fuller meaning and richer expression and more lasting value to all of the right relationships of life.

I am sure that Peter was a more understanding and devoted husband after this experience. A deeper sympathy for the problems in hearts and homes surrounding him came and a greater desire to be of help to others in need came to this humble fisherman who grew to be a pillar of the Christian Church.

So, we too are not called to abandon our love and concern for family and friends nor our desire to give time and help to our community and others around us.

As we seek the answer to His call "Lovest Thou Me?" we hear His words "In as much as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Cancer Unit Urge Adults To Get Yearly Checkup

AMERICAN Cancer Soviety urges all adult Americans to do two things to protect themselves against the fight of cancer, Monroe Fund drive head Richard B. Walters said last night. Monroe County's Chapter of the national group will have a fund drive April 1-4 locally.

They are: 1. have a medical checkup annually no matter how well you feel; 2. learn cancer's danger signals and go to your doctor immediately if one of them lasts longer than two weeks.

The reason for this, Walters says, is cancer typically begins as a "localized" disease. At the start, just one of the tiny cells of the body, or perhaps in a few cells, undergoes an unfortunate change — it becomes a malignant cell, cancer.

The cancer sell reproduces itself by dividing into two cells which in turn redivide and so on. All of the descendants of the original cancer cell are themselves cancer cells. Thus cancer grows.

The great majority of cancers originate on the surface of some tissues such as the skin, the inner surface of the uterus, the lining of the mouth, stomach, intestines, bladder or a bronchial tube, or the lining of a duct to the breast, prostate gland or elsewhere.

Remain At Site

For a time, such cancers typically remain at the site of origin and are visible only under a microscope, but later growing into a mass that can be seen with the naked eye. While it remains confined to its source of origin this lesion is known as "carcinoma in situ," that is "cancer in its original site."

After a time, some of the cancer cells penetrate beyond the surface and "invade" the underlying tissues. This is "Invasion Cancer". After invading, the cancer continues to grow but for a time the cancer cells may remain more or less together as an intact mass, though perhaps spreading irregularly. So long as all of the living cancer cells remain where the disease started, it is said to be "localized."

The more dangerous phases of cancer are the later ones. Some of the cancer cells eventually become detached and are carried through the lymph channels or blood vessels to other parts of the body.

This process is known as "metastasis." But the body hasa protective mechanism. The detached cancer cells may be trapped in a lymph node in the region of the original organ. This retards the spread for a time. This stage of the desease is known as "regional Involvement."

If left untreated the cancer cells eventually spread to many parts of the body. This is "advanced cancer". Death is then almost inevitable, although not necessarily quick.

In theory, all cancer can be cured when it is possible to remove or destroy all of the cancer cells existing in the patient's body. This is easily accomplished by surgery when cancer is found in the "carcinoma in situ" stage.

Survey Or Radiation

It can usually be accomplished by surgery or radiation therapy when found in the "localized" stage. It can often be done by surgery or radiation therapy when in the "regional involvement" stage. It can almost never be done once cancer cells have spread through the patient's body.

The problem then is to detect cancer before it has spread so that it can be removed by surgery or destroyed by radiation. For unknown reasons, some cancers grow and spread slowly while others grow and spread rapidly. Some types spread with such rapidity that they are incurable at the present time.Fortunately, about half of all cancers are of the type that are presently curable.

Recently a five-year cancer survival report was released by the American Cancer Society. The report stated that 93 per cent of localized skin cancers were cured; 82 percent of localized uterus cancer was cured and 46 percent regional involvement were cured.

Localized breast cancer has a cured percentage of 82 and 48 percent in regional involvement; 68 percent of rectum and colon localized cancer has been cured and 34 percent of regional involvement for the same area.

Also 52 percent of prostate localized cancer has been cured and 34 percent regional involvement; has been cured; stomach cancer, localized, 37 percent cured and 13 percent of regional involvement in the same area cured; Lung cancer, localized, saw 17 percent cured and 5 percent regional involvement cured.

East Stroudsburg Officer Gets Degree In Japan

COLLEGE PARK, Md. — Richard S. Kintner of East Stroudsburg, was among 78 members of the 1962 graduating class of the Far East Division of the University of Maryland to receive baccalaureate degrees during a commencement held March 25 in Tokyo, Japan.

The ceremony, which was held at the Kudan Kaikan Auditorium in Tokyo, was the sixth formal commencement exercise in the Far Easts Division, since its establishment in 1956. The Far East Division of the university was organized in cooperation with the armed forces to offer evening classes to armed forces personnel and their dependents that lead to a bachelor's degree.

Principal speaker at the commencement was Edwin O. Reischauer, U. S. Ambassador to Japan. The degrees were conferred by Dr. Albin O. Kuhn, executive vice president of the University of Maryland.

Of the degrees granted 44 were bachelor of science and 34 bachelor of arts. The graduates included 31 members of the Army, 27 Air Force, 1 Navy, and 19 civilians.

Attended Penn State

Prior to enrolling with the University of Maryland, Col. Kintner attended Penn State. He arrived in Japan in 1959, enrolled with Maryland and completed his degree requirements at the Tachikawa and Fuchu education centers.

An excellent student, Col. Kintner earned a medallion for maintaining a straight "A" average for fifteen consecutive hours and has been listed three times on the "Dean's List."

With the colonel on his present assignment in Japan are his wife Catherine and their two children, Robert (11), and Leslie (9).

PM Art Group Completes Project For County Home

A PERMANENT collection of 33 original works of art were presented yesterday afternoon to the Monroe County Home by members of the Pocono Mts. Art Group.

Request to sponsor paintings was extended to the Art Group by Mrs. Alexander Lee, a member of the county home unit of Red Cross Grey Ladies, and authorized by its chairman, Mrs. Theodore Viechnicki.

On a previous tour of the building by Mrs. Donald R. Holmgren, project chairman, and members of her committee, nine rooms were selected with available wall space to house the extensive display of art.

Assembled by the chairman, through the cooperation of 27 members of the Art Group, the paintings represent a varied group of traditional and contemporary art.

The pictures run the gamut from a variety of gay flowers, to seascapes and still-life. Landscapes tour the countryside and guests at the home will recognize many local scenes painted especially for this collection.

A reproduction of a religious painting was presented by Rev. Wesley Crowthers of Shawnee. It will hang in the men's dining room, which is also used for church services.

Also presented were three paintings which depict a group of inquisitive snowy herons, two weighty barnyard hens, and a strutting, flamboyantly plumed rooster.

Commenting on the success of the project, Mrs. Holmgren gave full credit to the artists. "Paintings are not turned out on an assembly line basis. It was an ambitious project, and many hours of their work are represented in this exceptionally fine collection, she said.

The paintings were presented by Mrs. John Farly, president of the Art Group, and accepted by John Lesoine, Monroe County Commissioner, and Supt. and Mrs. Charles Haney on behalf of the Monroe County Home and its guests.

Taking part in the informal ceremony were Walter Sharp, vice president of the Art Group; Mrs. Theodore Viechnicki, chairman of the county home unit of the Grey Ladies; Mrs. Holmgren, project chairman and committee members, Mrs. Alexander Lee, Frank Fitzgrald and Otto Christ.

Dr. Wimer's Article In Publication

A PAPER of Dr. Kurt Wimer, professor of political science at East Stroudsburg State College, is appearing in the current issue of the Yearbook of the American Philosophical Society.

The article deals with policies of President Wilson during the latter part of his presidency.

Wimer has shown that President Wilson consistently advocated a policy of what would now be called "collective security."

The article points out when the Senate, hostile to some of Wilson's ideas, failed to approve a peace treaty negotiated by Wilson, the President set limits beyond which he would not compromise.

It also discloses that to his disappointment Wilson saw his life's work defeated when the Senate failed to give consent to ratification of the treaty of Versailles.

Wimer's manuscript is found in the Social Science Section of the 1962 publication of the American Philosophical Society.

Dr. Wimer is currently on research leave supported by the Rockefeller Foundation.

Old Bijou Part Of Local History

By Jim Shafer

MOST OLD odds and ends are cherished but happenings of the days gone by are probably remembered most of all. This facet of life is not only all ages but mostly by our senior citizens.

One fond memory was the Bijou Theatre reportedly owned by William Eyer.

It was established he was not the first owner but who did before him was not documented. He operated it until 1911 when he sold the theatre to Ottmar Koch.

Investigation however showed that Koch was the man responsible for bringing movies into Stroudsburg.

His widow, Mrs. Elizabeth "Lizzie" Koch, said, "I don't recall who said it and I don't remember as it happened before I knew Ottmar but someone told me Ottmar and the late David Griffith operated a movie show in a tent erected where the Stroudsburg Methodist Church now stands."

She added, "We opened the "Nickelett" and operated it until 1907 when we sold it to Carrie and Bert Palmer and Roe Bush. Then we purchased the Bijou from William Eyer."

Located On Main

The Bijou was located on Main St, where Rea & Derick Drug store is now located. At that time Wallace's store was on the corner of Sixth and Main Sts., then a vacanct lot, the Bijou, Brown and Keller's Furniture Store, a small alley, the Central House and Wyckoff's New York Store.

Mrs. Koch laughed, "I did everything at the theatre except patch the rolls of film. That I refused to learn. I sold tickets, cleaned the windows, cleaned and scrubbed the interior of the movie house. Well, just everything."

Mr. and Mrs. Koch sold the Bijou in 1917 to Joseph Graves, who operated the Stroud Theatre on Sixth St. Mrs. Koch said, "It was getting to the point of too many show places in Stroudsburg and the Stroud was a fine new place and was drawing large crowds."

Another First

After selling the Bijou, Ottmar Koch opened a service station at the corner of Ninth and Thomas Sts. Here he established another first in the area. The Frank Martz Bus Company was just starting to operate in the region and it was here that the buses were serviced when they arrived from Scranton, headed for Philadelphia.

Fred Eyer, son of the late William Eyer, owner of the Bijou before the Kochs, said he recalled how the show house got its name. Mr. Koch started a contest to name the show house and Lester B. Hughes, a linotype operator at the Times office, named it.

Eyer said, "I think his prize was a season pass to the theatre. But that was long ago and I was a lad of about eight or nine so I'm not too sure."

Mrs. Koch recalled the name of the man who operated the projectors in the Bijou as if it was yesterday. "Frank Thomas was the operator. He's dead now but I remember him," she said.

Mrs. Koch also recallected her early childhood when her parents operated a grocery store on Main St., where "Two Guys Up the Street" are now located. She smiled, sat back in the chair and said, "It was my job to water the horse when they returned from delivering grocery orders. I had to walk him across the street, it was dirt then, to the American House and pump water into the trough."

Recently the name of a theatre, Bijou by name, appeared in one of the columns of The Daily Record and many people called the newspaper office to give facts about it —where it was, who owned it, who operated the machines and other things.

This showed interest in the history of Stroudsburg in which the Bijou played a small but educational part.

Chest Seen At Low Ebb; Meet Called

THE Monroe County Community Chest and Council has reached a low ebb and needs the assistance of past officials of the organization E. Holt Wyckoff Jr. expressed at a recent conference of the board of directors.

As a result of Wyckoff's appeal a special emergency meeting has been called by the directors for Monday, Apr. 9 in the Penn Stroud Hotel at 7:30 p.m.

Letters have been sent to all past presidents, past campaign chairman, past chairman of budget and finance committees and officers and directors urging them to be present.

The letter was sent as a direct result of the lack of quorum (nine members) necessary at the Monday night meeting.

The board tabled a recommendation that the Children's Aid Society begin their expansion program to include a Family Service agency.

Also tabled was a letter from the Scranton-Pocono Girl Scout Council relative to the cut in the air allocation of funds from the Chest.

Salary increase was discussed in relation to the clerk ot the chest office. Mrs. Frederick has not been given a raise since September, 1960. A motion was made to increase the salary $200 per year. No vote could be taken.

Bail will be set by the court. Salerno was arrested by State Police of the Mt. Pocono barracks in Wyoming, Pa., on Wednesday for a burglary in the Swiftwater area.

Withhold, Why?

There are many things the matter with the Administration's tax bill. It discriminates in tax rates paid by one business as opposed to its competitor, it would practically eliminate advertising to inform the public on issues, and it would give the Government the deciding voice in how businessmen should spend their own money in the quest for new orders.

But much of the attention has focused on the interest and dividend withholding provisions of the bill. This plan to deduct 20 per cent of all but minimum payments has come under heavy fire, and with good reasons.

Critics say first that the withholding system is unnecessary, coming as it does just when the Internal Revenue Service is installing electronic machines to cross check such payments with tax returns and thus smoke out all the cheaters.

And it is clear that a great many innocent people are going to suffer hardships if this tax bill becomes law. Many retired people and widows depend entirely on interest and dividend payments to live. Many of them, although they pay taxes, do not owe 20 per cent of the total interest and dividend payments they draw. Yet, the banks and corporations will be compelled to deduct more than these people owe, and they will have to do without the mony for the many months it takes before time to file for a refund, and the many weeks before the refund is paid.

That 20 per cent rate is correct for almost nobody.

All the banks and corporations which make such payments will have to set up equipment, allocate office space and engage employees to do this unpaid work of acting as tax collector for the Government. This will reduce their funds for constructive purposes — at a time when industry is being urged to expand.

It wouldn't be surprising, either, to learn some months from now that the perennial income tax cheats had withdrawn their investments from U. S. companies and shipped them abroad where there is no withholding—adding a mite to the balance of payments problem.

This plan penalizes the honest, but it will do little to deter the cheater.

'Sweeping Under The Rug'

Being ashamed of the boisterous conduct, rowdyism and downright hellishness of some young people is not enough. Being ashamed of crime news published in newspapers or denying its existence is about the same as a slovenly housewife who sweeps the dirt under the rug with the hope that nobody finds it.

Time and time again there are those who cry out in a loud voice "Ain't it a shame that boys and girls fight, yell and shout like wild jackasses on busses." "Ain't it a shame that so and so were defrauded out of their money by the X gyp company." "Ain't it a shame that there is not one Negro State Senator." "Ain't it a shame that so many children drop out of school," et cetera ad infinitum.

Being ashamed of something is of little value unless it prods those who feel its sting to take the necessary action to seek to change the conditions of which they are ashamed.

It is better to light a candle than to curse the darkness. It is more important to do something to change what is wrong than to sit down in a comfortable chair talking about what somebody else should do. It is time to change the emphasis from what other people should do to what "I" must do to make possible the conditions of which I am ashamed. —Philadelphia Tribune

A Mother's Plea

A mother telephones:

"My son was one of those in the Bay of Pigs. He is now in prison. Castro will kill him. We need $2,000,000 to exchange tractors for lives. Will you help?"

Who can answer this plea? Who knows how to reach the heart of a Communist? We permit Americans to rot in Chinese prisons because we know no way to get them out. How can we do anything for the Cubans whom we abandoned to a cruel death in the Bay of Pigs? Shall we blame ourselves? Shall we blame them? Shall we merely say that some live and some die?

Each week, nearly 2,000 Cuban refugees arrive in Miami. There are all sorts of schemes to help them. Some of the schemes are feasible, some fade from the memory of their authors. What is most important is to educate those who need to continue their schooling and to provide Cuban schools for the very young.

But will these refugees ever be able to return to Cuba or will they become elements in the American melting pot? Rich and cultured Cubans have lost all their possessions. Some have already re-established themselves in the United States; others face all the problems and difficulties of refugees.

But, when the men who went to fight for Cuban freedom in the Bay of Pigs are murdered by Castro, who will speak in their memory? Perhaps a memorial to them will be erected in Miami, but a mother asks: "Can you help?" And one does not know how to help.

As it appears at this moment, the Cuban refugees in the United States are not likely to go back to their homes any more than the Russian or Hungarian or Polish refugees have been able to return to their homes. Nothing short of war will solve the Cuban problem any more than 40 years of talk wiped out Communism in Soviet Russia.

The refugee problem is one of resettlement. They cannot all crowd into Miami, which has no industry for them. They need to find work in all parts of the United States so that they are not ghettoized as the Puerto Ricans have been in New York City.

Whatever skills they possess should become a valuable asset to the United States. Resettlement is the approach to this problem by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, but such a program will be resisted on the very ancient sociologic truism that birds of a feather flock together, which the professors call "community of kind."

The reason that we have ghettos in our large cities is that people of a kind in the first generation like to live together because they speak the same language, are accustomed to their own particular foods, like to see familiar faces on the streets and in movies, and hate to be ridiculed by those who came before. In the third generation, the ghetto begins to break down.

And these erstwhile newcomers look upon still more recent immigrants. It is surprising how many Italo-Americans do not know a word of Italian and that many children of Jewish parents speak not a word of Yiddish.

Resettlement takes time and patience and in a country where unemployment is the principal social problem, there will be resistance to giving the newer refugees jobs. Our labor unions are not always without discriminatory practices.

Nevertheless, over the years, those discriminated against break through to get the jobs and even to hold positions in the unions and then they, in turn, discriminate against newcomers. And so the wheel goes round, but meanwhile human beings suffer.

The question also arises as to how many people this country can hold. Our population will soon reach 200,000,000 in 4,000,000 square miles of territory. The racial composition of our people grows constantly different and more mixed.

Anglo-Saxon traditions disappear and not only have Eastern European traditions and habits infiltrated, but Latin, Asiatic and African concepts of life have become part of the American amalgam.

In half a century, this will give us a totally new American characteristic. Those who refuse to recognize the nature of this change, do not understand what is happening in their world and those who try to resist this assimilation are bound to fail now as such resistance has always failed throughout history.

These are among the major problems of resettlement. The alternative is genocide.

The Pennsylvania Story

Funds From The Primary

By Mason Denison

Harrisburg — Reporter's Notebook:

$26,275 Worth of Candidates!—It may come as somewhat of a surprise to many, but by the time candidates for "state" office wound up filing their nominating petitions by the deadline March 12, Pennsylvania's coffers were richer to the tune of some (unofficial) $26,275.

Reason for this of course is that candidates filing petitions with the State Elections Bureau must pay a filing fee, the returns from which go into the Commonwealth's General Fund . . . The fee varies with the office . . . Candidates for State Committee posts (of which there were 327 filings) pay $10 . . . Candidates for State Senate (82) and State House of Representatives (679) pay a $25 filing fee . . . Congressional office-seekers (98) pay a slightly higher filing fee of $35, while the statewide offices of Governor (five filed for this office), Lieutenant-Governor (2), Secretary of Internal Affairs (2), and U.S. Senate (2) pay $50 each.

Via the use of ultra-sonic mathematics, this rounds out to something around $26,275—and includes candidates who either later decide to withdraw, or whose petitions were rejected for one reason or another . . . Once the fee is paid on filing, incidentally, it is not returnable.

Of perhaps particular interest is the fact that the largest group filing—that is, 679 for the State House of Representatives—there are only 210 seats available . . . Of course each seat pays $9000 a year!

We Erred; We'll Admit It—In Monday's column this week, in pointing up registration fluctuations within Pennsylvania and how difficult it is to assess party strength on the basis of registrations, one of the fluctuating factors mentioned was the ability of a registrant to change party from before a primary to another party after the primary and before the general election.

We erred . . . The State Election Code states flatly that an elector may not change enrollment between primary and general election and may change it not more than once between general election and the next primary election . . . (If the Mansfield State College folks will build another "official doghouse" we'll move in—with no question of quo jure!)

The new registration period—for other than party changes—however opens May 21 and continues to September 17.

The New Look? — Nothing much has been said about it yet but one of the "new facets" Congressman William W. Scranton, GOP organization candidate for governor plans to introduce if he successfully makes the run in the May primary and the November general election, is to elevate Pennsylvania's lieutenant-governorship to a point of top-flight responsibility and administrative stature.

The idea has been kicked around before by previous chief exectives but nothing much ever materialized . . . The lieutenant-governor for the most part has merely reposed as a "stand-by step-in" should anything happen to the governor, plus service as the presiding officer of the Senate and membership on a few boards and commissions . . .

The Scranton plan follows closely that already in vogue on the national level.

The proposal incidentally was one of the reasons up-and-coming State Senator Raymond P. Shafer, Meadville, gave up plans to run for Congress from his district and accent slating as the Republican lieutenant-governor candidate . . . World War II PT boat skipper and onetime hard-hitting Crawford County district attorney sees eye-to-eye on the Scranton "liason" program . . . In fact it was one of the primary reasons he was willing to accept the spot on the organization ticket.

The Allen-Scott Report

Sale Of Grain To Red China Blocked

By Robert S. Allen and Paul Scott

Washington, March 30 — The vigorous opposition of two influential members of Congress played a major role in stopping the sale of $400 million worth of grain to Communist China and North Korea.

The huge grain shipment was barred by President Kennedy after he learned that Speaker John McCormack, D-Mass., and Representative A. Paul Kitchin, D-N.C., chairman of a special House investigating subcommitte were opposed to the sale and were ready to light a congressional bonfire if it wasapproved.

Word of this explosive legislative opposition was given the President by Commerce Secretary Luther Hodges during a White House meeting called to determine whether a private export license for shipment of the grain should be granted.

International Trade Corporation, a Seattle, Wash., firm, had applied for the license to ship six million tons of wheat and barley to Red China and 4.5 million tons to North Korea over three-year period.

The refusal of the license was announced by the Commerce Department in a two-sentence statement issued last Friday. It made no mention of the following dramatic White House meeting during which the legislators' intervention tipped the scales against the sale.

Undersecretary of State George Ball and Dr. Walt Rostow, chairman of the State Department's Planning Commission had just finished a vigorous argument supporting the grain sale when the President, turning to Secretary Hodges, asked for his views, stating:

"Luther, since it is your responsibility to grant or deny this license, let's hear from you.

'Before giving you my own position," Hodges replied, "I would like to present the views of Speaker McCormack and Representative Kitchin who is chairman of a House subcommittee investigating the sale of strategic materials to the Communist block."

TAKING A STAND — "Have they expressed themselves?" inquired the President. "Qnite vigorously," said Secretary Hodges. "They called me personally and expressed very strong objections to the sale. They requested that I make their views known to you."

"On what grounds are they opposed?" asked the President.

"Speaker McCormack took the position that the sales would serve to bolster a sinking Communist government at a time when we should be taking steps to hasten its downfall," reported Hodges. "He warned that approval of the shipment of grain to Peiping would touch off major foreign policy debate in Congress that could easily endanger passage of your trade program."

"What did Representative Kitchin say?" questioned the President.

"Kitchin was very blunt," replied Hodges. "He threatened a full-scale investigation."

"What is your recommendation?" the President asked.

"As you know," said Hodges, "I have been opposed to granting the license from the outset unless you should rule it in the national interest to permit such sales. This legislative opposition reinforces my position."

"There are good arguments on both sides," said the President in summing up, "However, my decision is that we do nothing to jeopardize the trade bill. We can't afford to have that important legislation mixed up in a China policy debate."

Later, the President called Hodges and directed him to reject the license and issue a terse statement, reading:

"There was no evidence that the order held by I.T.C. was based upon a request from the government concerned. It is rejected."

This statement was drafted by Secretary Ball and Dr. Rostow They prepared it to keep the door open for future sales to Communist China. Their argument is that surplus grain can be used to temper the Chinese Communist hostilities toward the U.S.

CHINA POLICY REVIEW — The U.S. does not recognize either Communist China or North Korea, and has a tight embargo against trade with both countries.

At the President's request, Dr. Walt Rostow has begun an overall review of our policy toward Communist China. This review is based on a State Department policy paper stating that Sino-Soviet relations are deteriorating so fast that the U.S. should adopt a flexible China policy to take advantage of the alleged split.

This view of a Russia-China split is challenged by the Joint Chiefs of Staff and Central Intelligence Director John McCone. They hold that the rift is not nearly as deep as claimed in paper.

ON THE INSIDE — President Kennedy personally interceded with congressional leaders to win their approval for Brazil's President Goulart to address a joint session of Congress next week. An earlier request from the State Department was rejected by House Speaker McCormack and Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, D-Mont., on the ground that too many foreign dignitaries have been addressing Congress. Actually, the leaders are opposed to giving Goulart a congressional sounding board because of his soft stand on Castro at the Punta Del Este conference, and his government's failure to support the U.S. at the Geneva disarmament talks...

America's First Lady returned from India with a load of gifts, including an ivory lamp from President Rajendra Prasad, a Tanjore plate and a photograph from Vice President Radakhrishna, and a carpet and paintings, and a set of books on Indian cultural subjects from Prime Minister Nehru. Her sister, Princess Lee Radziwill, received an ivory powder box from the President and two paintings from Nehru. Mrs. Kennedy gave Nehru a silver-fraed autographed photograph of the President and herself, and a Berneil box with an engraved greeting and the Presidential Seal. Mrs. Kennedy was also showered with fifty gifts for Caroline and John Jr.

Inside You And Yours

Calming Cranky Calves

By Burton H. Fern, M.D.

You haven't walked a half block and already calf muscles are screaming for extra blood!

Clogged, narrowed arteries can't pour in enough when you walk. You rest a minute, blood flow catches up and pain evaporates.

Smoke less; nicotine tightens arteries into spasm. Cotton between toes prevents chafing and cracking where germs easily gain a foothold. A cardboard box over your feet protect against the irritating weight of heavy blankets.

Put DANGER labels on hot water bottles and heating pads. Warmed feet need more blood!

Exercise blood vessels every few hours.

Lie down and raise the leg until it turns ghostly white. Then dangle it until the foot flushes red. Then repeat!

Gravity Helps

If calf muscles ache when you rest, raise the head of your bed with books or blocks and let gravity help.

Artery-relaxing medicines and surgery sometimes backfire. When drugs paralyze all blood vessels, blood pressure plummets. You need pressure to force blood into those screaming calf muscles.

Relaxed arteries in the good leg—and in the skin of the bad—swallow up more than their share of blood. Hardly any reaches those starving calf muscles.

Surgeons can help most calf muscles get by with only a trickle of blood. They can cut the tough tendon connecting calf muscles to the back of the heel. Unattached muscles can't do work and don't need extra blood.

Paralyzes Nerves

Just beneath the skin in back of the knee, surgeons can cut the large calf-muscles nerves paralyzing them completely. Paralyzed muscles need even less blood than normal.

With nerves cut in both legs, you can amble painlessly—although somewhat flat-footed—for miles.

This operation has been tried only 36 times. It will have to prove itself again and again before it's A-OK and GO condition in all operating rooms.

It promises to add miles to your life when you're bogged down by calf muscles' bloodthirsty screams!

Off The Record

By Bob Clark

Richard C. Harlow, late resident of LaAnna and a 50-year neighbor of area mountain folks was a perfectionist in all walks of life.

This third of a series of four articles covers their phase of Harlow's magnetic life. It was brought out in an eulogy offered by Lowell S. Ensor, president of Western Maryland College, at funeral services for the late great football coach, teacher, and advisor at Westminster, Md., Feb. 21.

Dr. Ensor said:

"The philosophy of perfection that dominated Richard Harlow's coaching career carried over into these other areas also. He became one of the foremost authorities in ornighology. Few men in this country knew more about birds and their eggs and habits than did he. He was never happier than when cultivating and nurturing the delicate gentian flower at his home in the Poconos. Rare species gathered from everywhere with this same passion for perfection.

"I will never forget the day our doorbell rang and as I opened the door, there in the vestibule stood Dick Harlow, this man of large physical stature looking all the larger in small confines of the narrow vestibule, with his hands gently cupped holding in tissue paper two of his most exquisite and delicate gentians for Mrs. Ensor — so delicate that you were afraid your breath would injure them. Could this tender soul be the same rugged giant among men I was to watch that very afternoon fire a football team with the desire to win? It was.

"Another avocation which he followed with the same intensity was the collection of antiques, a most precarious activity for the uninitiated amateur. But Mr. Harlow was never an amateur at anything. As a consequence, his collection of antiques — furniture, glassware and china is among the best private collections to be found. All of this portrays a man of many-sided splendors striving for the best, and in most instances, achieving it.

"A third facet I would lift up this afternoon is beautifully demonstrated by the draping of his country's flag over the casket holding all that is mortal of this distinguished man. It symbolizes another burning passion in his life — his great love for his country and his deep concern for its welfare and its position of leadership among the nations of the world. Relatively few men, even among service academy graduates, have been privileged to serve their country in both World Wars.

"But, Mr. Harlow did — A lieutenant in the infantry in World War I and a lieutenant commander in the Navy during World War II. The government recognized his outstanding ability as a leader of men, and nothing thrilled him more than to be given the opportunity, both early and late, to use that God-given talent to both lead men and train men in leadership in behalf of his country's interests.

"He was not simply a flag-waving, wartime patriot when patriotism is easy.

"Even in peacetime his concern continued with the same intensity that characterized his other activities. Complacent citizenship had no place in his vocabulary of thoughts. Throughout his life he loved his country with a deep and active loyalty, to which this flag is a most fitting tribute from the grateful government which he served.

Tomorrow—The fourth and last facets.

From a Newsletter: "In 1960 Paar blasted 'the untruthful things I've read about what was happening in Cuba. This man Castro is beloved by these people I do know that they have an honest government for the first time in Cuban history'."

BOROUGHITES are welcoming home Mayor and Mrs. Arthur Lehr who returned this past week from a nearly two month stay in Florida. They report having seen Arthur Brodhead, former Postmaster Edna Brodhead, and the Clarence Shafers who formerly had the Modern Cabins on Foxtown Hill Road. From postcards sent during their absence we learn that the Lehrs also were in the "New Fontainbleau Hotel" at Miami where John O'Keefe, a former manager of the Glenwood here, showed them through the 968 rooms of that $60 day hotel. The Lehrs covered much of Florida by automobile and enjoyed the Nassau Cruises stopping in Nassau to visit a niece.

Mrs. Charles Rapp has recovered from illness brought on by the flu. Her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Howard Waite, of Quakertown, have returned home after being with Mrs. Rapp for a few days.

Mrs. Clara Sinclair and Mrs. Eva Marshall of Stroudsburg and Miss Valerie Kaiser were dinner guests of Miss Nellie Burd, Sunday.

Mrs. George Hay, Mrs. Nelson Lightner, Sr., Rev. and Mrs. Raymond Poorstra, and Mrs. Forrest Smith represented the local Methodist Church at the Quarterly Conference held in Portland Methodist Church last Wednesday night. At that meeting about thirty officers of the churches and Sunday Schools and various organizations were elected. Both the Portland Methodist Churches and the Del. Water Gap Methodist Church made request, to be presented to the yearly Conference in June, that Mr. Poorstra be returned to these charges as pastor. Dr. Price Collins of Philadelphia, Dist. Supt. of the Northern District, conducted the conference at Portland. After the meeting the Portland ladies served refreshments.

The local Methodist Church will hold its Communion service Thursday night before Easter. Last year the service was held in the Presbyterian Church here. This year, the members of that church have been invited to attend the service in the Methodist Church which will be in charge of Rev. Raymond Poorstra.

Miss Alma Cyriax Bride In Grace Lutheran Church

Blue and yellow set the theme for the wedding of Miss Alma H. Cyriax, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Theodore H. Cyriax, East Stroudsburg, to Robert J. Storm, son of Mr. and Mrs. James L. Storm, Newtown.

Rev. William F. Wunder performed the 2:30 p. m. ceremony in the Grace Lutheran Church March 25 before the altar graced by snapdragons and pompons.

The bride, escorted by her father, chose a gown of bombazine fashioned with a scoop neckline, fitted bodice and tight sleeves coming to a point at the wrists. Her bouffant skirt with self fabric bow detailing at the hips fell to a formal train. A crown of seed pearls held her fingertip veil of imported French silk illusion. She carried a white Bible with white satin streamers. In the center was a white rosebud corsage. At her throat, the bride wore a family heirloom diamond pendant.

Miss Theodora Cyriax, sister of the bride was maid of honor. She wore a street length gown of powder blue chiffon with a white lace jacket, which featured a scoop neckline, brief sleeves and a bouffant skirt. She wore a matching floral headband, short white gloves and matching accessories. She carried a cascade bouquet of blue iris, white carnations and roses with streamers.

Mrs. Nancy Shimer, East Stroudsburg and Mrs. Betty Winkelmann, Stroudsburg, were bridesmaids. Their gowns matched the maid of honor's but in yellow. They carried yellow roses and white carnations.

Miss Janice Shafer, Stroudsburg, was flower girl. Her full length gown was yellow lace with a silk chiffon skirt. She carried white carnations, yellow roses and blue iris. All the bouquets had vari-colored streamers.

James Wescott, Stroudsburg served as best man. Carl Booth, East Stroudsburg and Charles Bush Stroudsburg were ushers. James Storm brother of the bridegroom was ringbearer.

Prior to the ceremony, Richard Matlock played a medley of organ wedding selections and accompanied Harvey Burris who sang "Because" and "I Love You Truly". During the wedding prayer he sang Mallot's "The Lord's Prayer".

Mrs. Cyriax chose a blue lace sheath dress for her daughters wedding. It featured an overskirt, blue accessories and pink sweetheart roses in a corsage completed the ensemble.

A beige sheath dress with matching coat and brown accessories was the choice of Mrs. Storm, the bridegroom's mother. She wore a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses.

Immediately following the ceremony, more than 100 guests attended the reception in the church social rooms where they were served from the four-tiered wedding cake. Streamers and white bells decorated the room.

For a wedding trip to Miami Beach, Fla. Mrs. Storm wore a navy blue suit with a pleated skirt and box jacket. Red accessories and the white rose corsage from the wedding banquet completed her attire.

The bride is a graduate of Stroud Union High School, 1958. The bridegroom graduated from Pocono Township High School in 1955.

The couple will reside in Roberta Ga., where Mr. Storm is employed as office manager for J. L. Jacobs Company, tax re-evaluation firm.

As geologists reconstruct the Gulf of Mexico's history, the briny waters began evaporating nearly 200 million years ago, leaving vast deposits of salt. Later new waters flowed into the basin and sediments accumulated atop the salt. Slowly the sediments hardened into stone heavier than the salt and under this pressure the salt was squeezed upward like toothpaste.

Birds Of Prey Program Planned For Dutch Treat

One of America's authorities on birds of prey who has just captured the rarest of these creatures, will come to the Penn-Stroud Hotel when Jim Fowler appears here on Thursday, April 5 to present his lecture-demonstration before the Dutch Treat Club.

Jim Fawler

Known in many countries for his ability to train eagles, hawks and falcons, Fowler embarked early in 1960 for a three-month expedition to British Guiana to track down one of the largest and most powerful birds in the world, the Harpy eagle. The big bird is considered a rarity and presented a real challenge to Fowler since there was little information available on its nesting habits, mating, feeding of young or number of eggs.

"This was a long-held dream of mine," says Fowler, a six-foot-six inch native of Georgia. The Harpy eagle lives in the rain forests of the Amazon Basin. Here Jim and members of his expedition roamed the true jungles of the world, only about four degrees north of the Equator in search of the bird. British Guiana was chosen because the eagle has been reported there in greater numbers than anywhere else.

Fowler set out on his mission and was soon gratified by success. Not only did he succeed in locating the Harpy eagle's nesting place, but also managed to capture some of the young birds and put one through a training program to take its place with the other exotic birds in his lecture program, which he calls "Lightning on the Wing."

Fowler began the study of falconry as a hobby while attending Earlham College in Indiana. He has been making an intensive survey of eagles and other birds of prey for the past five years. He spent the better part of a year on an expedition in Africa, tracking down the Marital Eagle, a magnificent creature with a wingspread of close to seven feet. Explorer Fowler began his adventures in Capetown and worked gradually northward until he reached the remote bush country of Barotseland in Northern Rhodesia.

He also captured the fish-eating Sea Eagle, feathered cousin of our own American Bald Eagle and considered a clown among predatory birds. The Blackshouldered Kite, a colorful, high-spirited hawk, was also brought back alive by the young naturalist.

Fowler deplores the shocked distastes that many people demonstrate towards birds of prey. He believes that thy are as beautiful as they are necessary in their role of maintaing the balance of nature. In demonstrating of this, he cites the monkey-loving Martial Eagle of Africa, where natives once killed off many of them. As a result, the birds' natural prey, the monkeys, increased in such numbers as to become an agricultural problem. "After all," says Fowler, "let's not forget that man is the greatest predator and spoiler of nature of all the earth's creatures."

Jim trains all his wild birds to fly freely, instructing them mainly by reward, a piece of beef. "The birds never had it so good, he explains, "and they live twice as long in captivity."

In his program here, Fowler describes how fierce eagles, hawks and falcons are hunted, trapped and trained. He releases his birds to fly freely in the audience. These exceptionally well-trained creatures engage in controlled flight to return, on command, to their master's arm. Jim also gives a demonstration of the ancient art of falconry and explains its age-old traditions.

POSTMASTER — Norman B. Gregory of East Stroudsburg (right), assures Frederick C. Belen, Assistant Postmaster General, Bureau of Operations, of full cooperation of his Post Office in President Kennedy's Executive Order extending official recognition to Federal employee unions for the first time. The Post Office Department has 489,224 union members—nearly two thirds of 762,000 total in the Federal government.

Gregory Promises Support To JFK's 'Letter-Spirit'

PHILADELPHIA — Postmaster Norman B. Gregory of East Stroudsburg, yesterday assured Assistant Postmaster General Frederick C. Belen, Bureau of Operations, of the full cooperation of his Post Office in complying with "the letter and spirit" of President Gennedy's Executive Order officially recognizing employee organization in the federal government.

Gregory was one of more than 85 postmasters meeting in Philadelphia for an all-day workshop and indoctrination session on application of the President's order to their Post Offices.

The Post Office Department is sponsoring seven such regional workshop sessions over the nation for postmasters from more than 600 major cities where 80 percent of the Department's 585,000 postal workers are employed and where the bulk of the nation's mail is handled.

The local postmaster learned that the Post Office Department as Uncle Sam's No. 1 employer of union members, has 489,224 union members in the federal services.

"These sessions will pave the way for full enactment of the President's program in the Post Office Department before the Order takes effect July 1," Postmaster General J. Edward Day told postmaster at a similar meeting held in New York.

The Daily Investor

Don't Worry About It!

By William A. Doyle

Q. Last year I sold some stock and the broker sent me a check for the proceeds. A few weeks ago the broker informed me that there had been an error. He said the stock had been sold at a lower price and I was asked to refund about $400. I did refund all but $25.76.

I had already filed my income tax return for 1961 and had to pay an accountant $25 to file an amended return, in order to get a refund on the taxes I had paid on that $400. I say the broker should stand that $25 expense. Also the brokerage firm wants to charge me 76 cents interest on what it says was a "loan" to me of the money involved.

The broker considers this some kind of a joke and says I have to pay. How about this?

A. Tell that broker to laugh out of the other side of his mouth. The joke's on him. You have the $25.76. Ask him how he intends to get it.

Actually, you're the friendly type of customer. Many people might have put up a fight about sending back any money at all.

It usually comes as a shock to learn that you have to pay for a broker's error. An honest mistake, such as the incorrect price report on the purchase or sale of stock, is the kind that a customer normally is obligated to make good.

But there's no reason in the world why you should pay any additional expenses. It cost you money to file an amended tax return. Let the broker stand that cost. In my book, the broker should have had his accountant handle that chore—with no time, effort or expense on your part.

As for that "76-cent interest charge" on that so-called loan. Tell him to go whistle up a windstorm.

Q. In October, 1957, I started buying shares of American Cyanamid stock, through the New York Stock Exchange's Monthly Investment Plan. I made my last purchase two months ago. At that time, I closed my MIP account. I requested and received a stock certificate for my shares. If I sell now, how in the world do I figure out my cost, for tax purposes?

A. Each time you made an investment through MIP, you received a "confirmation slip"—much the same as you do when you buy any securities. The confirmation slip is your record of the price you paid.

If you plan to sell all your American Cyanamid shares, you simply add up all the money your confirmation notices show you paid. That's your total cost price. The difference between that total cost price and the net proceeds you receive from the sale will be your net profit or net loss.

However, if you do sell now, you will have to figure this out on both a short-term and long-term capital gain or loss basis.

Any profit or loss you make on those shares you have owned for six months or less must be reported as short-term capital gain or loss. Any profits or loss you realize on those shares you have held more than six months must be reported as long-term capital gain or loss.

THEY'LL DO IT EVERY TIME — By JIMMY HATLO

Dear Abby

Silence Is Best Policy!

Dear Abby: I wish I knew what to do about a woman I must see very often, and who is making a nervous wreck of me. Whenever she is around she monopolizes the conversation. She has something to say on every subject, whether she knows anything about it or not. Her big fault is breaking into a conversation. This butting-in business makes me very angry. No one can finish a sentence while she is present. She is the knid who can dish it out, but can't take it. Don't tell me to quit seeing her. She is a relative and lives near me, and I don't want a family fight.

NERVOUS

Dear Nervous: The type of person you describe couldn't care less about listening. All she wants to do is talk. Either you must fight fire with fire—go right on talking, and continue while she attempts to interrupt you—or you must turn in your tongue and surrender.

Dear Abby: I belong to a poker club. I won't say I clean up on the girls every week. But I win more than I lose. Whenever I win a pot, one woman says, "Oh, well, lucky in cards—unlucky in love." In other words, my husband is no bargain. I am very satisfied with my husband and I resent the implication. How should I handle her? She is getting on my nerves.

LUCKY IN CARDS

Dear Lucky: Call her bluff and ask her to explain her remark.

Dear Abby: I was married to—let's call him "John"—for nine years. During that time "John" endeared himself to my family, who thought he was tops. He wasn't as "tops" as they thought he was, but that's another story. "John" and I were divorced. My family blamed me. I didn't care to defend myself by tearing down "John" so, of course, he is still tops with my family.

When they have family get-togethers, they invite "John." He doesn't have the good sense to refuse, so consequently he and I are thrown together often. This annoys me because I want to be with my family, but I don't enjoy myself with "John" there. Is there a solution?

"JOHN" EX

Dear Ex: Tell the one in your family with whom you feel you can be the most candid that you would like to attend the family get-togethers, but would appreciate knowing in advance if "John" will be there. It is your privilege to protect yourself from social situations which could be embarrasing.

Confidential To "Sleepless Nights": If your religion permits it, telephone your local PLANNED Parenthood center and tell them what you have told me. The Lord doesn't want you to have any more childre than you can feed.

TV Highlights

"SAM BENEDICT," starring Edmond O'Brien as a dynamic contemporary lawyer practicing in a busy metropolitan community, will be seen on NBC-TV on Saturdays from 7:30 to 8:30 p. m. starting in the fall. In contrast to other series on the law, this will focus on the character of the lawyer rather than on the individual cases themselves. Each episode will be a day in the life of a lawyer, dealing with parts of several cases in which he is involved. E. Jack Neuman is the creator, executive producer and head writer for the series.

The three stars of "Kings of Comedy" on "International Showtime" from 7:30 to 8:30 on Chs. 3 and 4, may not be well known in this country but they are household words in Great Britain. Benny Hill, Tony Hancock and Eric Sykes are seen regularly on BBC, and they have chosen their most popular acts for this program, which was especially prepared for the series by the BBC.

The drovers come to the aid of a woman doctor, accused of malpractice in the death of the wife of the town's mayor on "Rawhide" 7:30 to 8:30 on Chs. 2 and 10. Gail Kobe stars as Dr. Luise Amadon. From 8:30 to 9:30 on "Route 66" Buz (George Maharis) is blinded in a construction accident. Barbara Barrie is featured as a blind girl who becomes his teacher.

"Robert Taylor's Detectives" will present its first two-act teleplay, starring Vera Miles and featuring Harold J. Stone. The drama is concerned with the numbers racket. Part I is from 8:30 to 9:30 on Chs. 3 and 4.

Music from Broadway and Hollywood, from the concert stage, folklore and the ballet, will comprise "Gala Performance" on the "Bell Telephone Hour" color broadcast from 9:30 to 10:30 on Chs. 3 and 4. Shirley Jones is the hostess and a singing star. Other stars are Maureen O'Hara, Steve Lawrence, Lorin Hollinder, Violette Verdy and Edward Villella. Miss O'Hara will sing folk songs of her native Iceland. Lorin Hollander, pianist, will perform the third movement of "Concerto No. 2" by Rachmaninoff, with Donald Voorhees and the Bell Telephone Orchestra.

After a space pilot crash lands in a rock-walled canyon on a planet millions of miles from earth, he ignores the warning of his companion about playing God to the planet's unique inhabitants, in "The Little People" on Rod Sterling's "The Twilight Zone," from 10 to 10:30, Chs. 2 and 10.

Tha "Slumlords" of cities—absentee landlords who perpetuate sub-standard tenements, for high profits without proper maintenance—are the targets of "Target: The Corruptors" on Chs. 6 and 7 from 10 to 11. Scott Marlowe is featured, Stephen McNally plays newsman Paul Marino.

Jack Benny, Pat Boone and Carline Richter are guests on "The Best of Paar" tonight from 11:15 to 1. Next week Art Linkletter takes over the "Tonight" show as first of a series of hosts.

Your Horoscope

By FRANCIS DRAKE

FRIDAY, MARCH 30, 1962

March 21 to April 20 (Aries)—Most professions and trades favored but close adherence to essentials urged. Elimination or forgetting of an important part of your routine can lead to delays, disappointments.

April 21 to May 21 (Taurus)—Today you must perform a selling operation. Enthuse those who are dubious about whether project or product is valued. If they embrace your thinking and cooperate, your battle is worth it.

May 22 to June 21 (Gemini)—With a promising day charted for tomorrow, it is incumbent upon you to build toward it sanely, firmly now. Make headway but at reasonable tempo so not to err nor strain. Tabu worry!

June 22 to July 23 (Cancer)—Period for recapturing congenial friends who have your interests at heart. Also for exploiting anew a good lead still untaped. Concentrate on the present, not the past.

July 24 to August 23 (Leo)—Some disturbing trends. Counter-attack with a skillful pattern caring for essentoials and eradicating waste items. Help in laborious trades, artistic matters, scientific study.

August 24 to September 23 (Virgo)—Mercury just finishing a two-day very favorable cycle. Entertain thoughts of continued effort along same lines that brought auspicious results before. Don't spend time on trifles.

September 24 to October 23 (Libra)—Less promising in some ways. Shun argument for argument's sake. This type of goings-on does not win popularity contests nor augment friends, help or cooperation.

October 24 to November 22 (Scorpio)—Curtail tendency to be careless. Day for careful thinking; make good use of time, steer efforts into productive channels. Can be auspicious period with intelligent handling.

November 23 to December 21 (Sagittarius) — Don't countenance slipshod or inferior efforts. They are not worthy of you, produce no lasting gains. Be proud of your past records, continue to strive capably to improve.

December 22 to January 20 (Capricorn)—Indefinite approach will get nowhere. Rely not on the uncertain help of those who MAY aid. To do it right, you must enter actively into the struggle, forthrightly as you can.

January 21 to February 19 (Aquarius)—Consolidate position, expand scope of attention to include special extra items worthy of your effort. Try new leads that appear to be solid for follow-up. Pursue arduously.

February 20 to March 20 (Pisces)—Curb desire to relax now. Save that for easy hours. Must lay groundwork for future advancement here. A lost opportunity is never regained. In leisure time, take different relaxation.

YOU BORN TODAY are an interesting, provocative type who should sensibly control your enthusiastic impulse, outspoken traits lest they make you misunderstood. Concentrate on things which can enhance your potential, broaden outlook. Tolerance, patience, cooperating with worthy associates is gateway to success. Determine early what objectives are. Then pursue without vascillating or changing goals. Forward, in calm, concise manner! Encompass the areas where gain is logical, possible, useful. People go to you for sympathy, help, and you seldom fail or deny them. May tend to worry needlessly. Don't anticipate trouble or hinderances. This aggravates, reduces your initiative and productivity. Birthdate of: Paul Verlaine, French poet, and many writers and statesmen.

No Change In Paret's Condition

Ex-Champion Moves Arms Occasionally

NEW YORK (AP) — Former welterweight champion Benny (Kid) Paret, unconscious for the fifth day and in a moderate coma, occasionally moved his arms Thursday.

The latest bullet from Roosevelt Hospital, however, reported his condition unchanged.

The report added that the 25-year-old Cuban, does not recognize people.

Paret was knocked out by Emile Griffith in the 12th round of their title bout at Madison Square Garden Saturday night.

Doctors said Paret's condition was critical and that he had only a slight chance to live.

Coming To U.S.

Paret's mother, Mrs. Maxima Crespo, said in Havana Thursday that she hopes to fly to the United States Friday. She said a flight to Miami is being arranged through the Cuban National Physical Education Institute.

Mrs. Crespo, 56, added she knows no one in Miami. She does not speak English.

Interviewed at the home of a sister, Mrs. Crespo said she believed her son would recover.

"But I have delivered (my hopes) to the great power of God," she said. "I never wanted him to fight. I don't want him to fight any more."

Dr. Manuel Acosta, Paret's personal physician, talked to hospital authorities and admitted there was only a slight chance that Paret would recover. Two neurologists said that, at best, the fighter's chances were less than 5 in 100.

Opposes Boxing

TOKYO (AP)—A Japanese boxing commission doctor said Thursday that, medically speaking, boxing should be outlawed.

Dr. Takashi Sakabe, co-author of a five-year study on injuries caused by boxing, added he was personally opposed to banning the sport "as studies show that if strict supervision is given, serious injuries can be prevented."

He said that from a medical viewpoint there was justification for stopping the sport because of the preponderance of head and eye injuries it causes.

The Tokyo doctor said that of 310 boxing injuries surveyed during the past five years almost all were of the head or eye variety.

However, he declared much could be accomplished by requiring strict supervision during training and stopping fights after a fighter has been knocked down twice.

Sakabe and a boxing commission spokesman said they thought the grave injuries to dethroned welterweight champion Benny Kid Paret could have been avoided.

"Paret's head was completely out of the ring," the spokesman said "we don't allow such things here."

Plum Traded To Detroit: Cassady Goes

DETROIT (AP) — The Detroit Lions of the National Football League traded quarterback Jim Ninowski, halfback Howard (Hopalong) Cassady and lineman Bill Glass to the Cleveland Browns Thursday for quarterback Milt Plum, halfback Tom Watkins and linebacker Dave Lloyd.

Plum, the league's leading paser the last two seasons, answers the Lions' need for a top-flight quarterback. Glass, a defensive end, was the big man in the trade for the Browns, who have needed help in their defensive line.

Ninowski, former Michigan State star, is returning to the Browns after two seasons with the Lions. He was Detroit's No. 1 quarterback most of last season when the Lions finished second in the Western Division. Cassady is a sixyear veteran of the NFL and was a two-time All-America halfback at Ohio State.

Glass played his college ball at Baylor and completed four seasons with the Lions.

Plum is a five-year veteran in the NFL and a Penn State graduate.

Watkins played at Iowa State and last year was his first in the NFL.

Lloyd played at Georgia and came to the Browns as a linebacker in 1959.

Although Plum recently criticized Cleveland Coach Paul Brown for his sytem of calling all the plays from the bench, a Browns' spokesman said this was not a factor in trading Plum and that the deal had been under negotiation since January.

Orioles Win 5th Straight; Dodgers Beat Yankees 5-4

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The streaking Baltimore Orioles won their fifth consecutive exhibition baseball game Thursday, beating the St. Louis Cardinals 7-2 behind the combined three-hit pitching of soldier Steve Barber and rookie Jim Lehew.

Barber, on leave from the Army and scheduled to be a weekend hurler with the Orioles this season, checked the Cards on one run and two hits for the first six innings before Lehew came on to wrap it up.

Rookie shortstop Julio Gotay got all three St. Louis hits, a pair of infield hits off Barber and a homer off Lehew. Oriole Jackie Brandt drove in three runs with two hits.

The Los Angeles Dodgers edged the New York Yankees 5-4 in 10 innings, Cincinnati trounced Philadelphia 15-6, Chicago's White Sox thumped Pittsburgh 11-15, Milwaukee defeated the New York Mets 6-2, Minnesota beat Detroit 7-4, and Kansas City defeated Washington 6-1.

The Chicago Cubs whipped Houston 7-5, Boston knocked off San Francisco 4-2, and the Los Angeles Angels defeated Cleveland 7-4.

Lee Walls doubled Wally Moon home with two out in the 10th after the Yankees had built an early bulge on Mickey Mantle's two-run homer and two RBIs by John Blanchard.

Three-run homers by Gordeon Coleman and Jerry Lynch were the key blows in the Reds' triumph. Roy Sievers countered with a three-run shot for the Phils.

Bob Friend, a 19-game loser last year for the Pirates, was tagged by the White Sox for eight runs in the first inning on seven singles and a walk, then was ejected from the game for aguing with an umpire.

Rookie Mack Jones belted a sixth inning triple that scored Eddie Mathews and snapped a 1-1 tie for the Braves.

Dick Rollins collected three doubls and drove in the Twins deciding run in the ninth against the Tigers.

George Altman had 4-for-4 with a two-run homer that accounted for the winning runs, in the Cubs victory. Frank Malzone had a homer and two singles for three RBI in the Red Sox's victory.

Albie Pearson and Leon Wagner each singled in two runs as the Angels struck for five in the fifth and snapped a 2-2 tie with the Indians.

Chisox Score Eight In 1st For 11-5 Win

SARASOTA, Fla. (AP) — The Chicago White Sox scored eight runs off Bob Friend in the first inning Thursday and added three more off Arthur Swanson in the second as they whipped the Pittsburgh Pirates 11-5 in an exhibition baseball game.

John Buzhardt and Frank Baumann divided the pitching chores for Chicago, with Buzhardt yielding four runs in the first five innings, including a bases-empty homer by Dick Stuart.

Friend reached the ninth man in the Sox batting order before he was able to get anyone out.

After the inning was completed, Friend had words with plate umpire Ed Hurley and Hurley ejected him from the game. The Pirates used rookie pitchers thereafter.

Texas Probing Basketball Fix

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP)—The House Investigating Committee ordered the Texas Department of Public Safety Thursday to launch a full-scale investigation of reports of game fixing in Southwest Conference basketball.

Following an eight-hour hearing, Committee Chairman Rep. Charles Ballman said "based on information presented today, the committee felt it warranted a continuation of the investigation because of the serious nature of the allegations."

Ballman's statement also said that representatives of the conference and its member schools "disclosed the information known to them and extended their fullest cooperation to the committee."

Top Officials

A parade of top conference officials, coaches and department of public safety personnell appeared before the committee in its day-long secret session.

The investigation was sparked by New York sports columnist Gene Roswell, who wrote that Eastern gamblers "are having headaches with the hoop shenanigans reportedly coming out of the Southwest Conference. The point spreads on SWC games move like water and most book won't carry their action."

Roswell said rumor had it that referees, not players, were involved.

Twenty-two conference officials voluntarily took lie detector tests at the Department of Public Safety early this month. The department did not make the test results public, but sent them to the conference which in turn gave them to the officials.

'Ageless' Minoso Sparks Up Cards

By TED SMITS
Associated Press Sports Editor

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — Saturnino Orestes Minoso, tireless and seemingly ageless, is pepping up the St. Louis Cardinals.

He's hitting the ball with authority, he's running the bases, he's clowning and keeping the squad happy, and he's happy himself with his wife and two sons with him for the first time in spring training.

"I feel like I just started baseball yesterday," says the colorful Cuban who performed from 1951 to 1961 with the Chicago White Sox and Cleveland Indians and built up a lifetime batting average of .304. He came to the Cardinals last winter from the Sox in exchange for Joe Cunningham.

"I'm only 38," he says. The Cardinal roster lists him as being born Nov. 29, 1922, which would make him 39 going on 40, and some think he may have passed that milestone.

He doesn't throw himself into calisthenics with the enthusiasm of the younger players but otherwise he is the Minoso of former years.

"I born with speed, I die with it," he says. "If I hit the ball I run."

He's happy to be a Cardinal.

"I think the Cardinals are great. I made a speech at on of their parties and I said that, because it's the way I feel. Gee whiz, I'm glad I was traded.

"Things are going good. I got hit with a pitch on my right elbow, but I play better when I'm hurt.

"I'm going to stay in baseball as long as I can becaus I love the game."

Buy Policy As Insurance On Title Bout

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—Promoters of the once-postponed Joe Brown-Carlos Ortiz lightweight title fight said Thursday they have bought a $45,000 policy to insure that the champion goes through with it.

Challenger Ortiz, 25, of New York will get $15,000 of it if the match set for April 21 at the Convention Center is called off because of illness or injury to Brown. The rest will go to the promoters' Silver State Sports Club.

The fight scheduled for Feb. 24 was postponed when the 35-year-old Brown of Houston, Tex., was bedded with tonsillitis.

No Site As Yet

NEW YORK (AP)—The promoters of the forthcoming heavyweight title fight between Sonny Liston and champion Floyd Pattrson said Thursday that Liston would not look for a training camp until a site had been selected for the bout.

Crusade Goes On To Bar Boxing

LONDON (AP) — Lady Edith Summerskill Thursday vowed to continue her campaign against boxing despite the British government's rejection of her latest "ban boxing" demands.

Lady Summerskill, a life peeress in the House of Lords and a former minister in a Labor government, scorched into the attack in Parliament Wednesday.

Her assault was sparked by the serious injuries suffered by Benny Paret in last Saturday's fight in New York.

Moore Faces Real Challenge Tonight

By BOB MYERS
Associated Press Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Archie Moore has swept through many a roadblock in his 26 years of boxing and now he faces another fork in the trial of his career.

"The Old Man," as younger fighters refer to Moore, takes on 25-year-old Alejandro Lavorante, promising Argentine heavyweight in 10 rounds or less at the Sports Arena Friday night.

A win over the 6-foot-4, 210-pound Lavo will propel Moore to a $35,000 payday. Archie hopes then to trim down to 175 pounds and defend what claim he has left of the world light heavyweight title. Middleweight champion Gene Fullmer would be the opponent.

Suppose Moore loses to the Latin?

"I am a positive thinker and my only thought is to succeed," he said Thursday.

This will be bout No. 616 in Moore's long career and only the 22nd for Lavorante, who was yet to be born when the old Mongoose had his first ring encounter. Now 45 or older, Archie surely must retire before too long.

Moore's advisor, shrewd old Jack Kearns, says his man is in the best shape he's seen him in more than a year. Kearns thinks Moore will weigh in at 192.

Pinkie George, manager and developer of Lavorante, views the match as a tossup.

The betting remained about the same Thurseay — 6-5 and take your pick.

Tobyhanna Man Misses Perfect Game; Hits 299

DICK (Moose) DelDonno of Tobyhanna missed a perfect game Wednesday night as he bowled a 299 at Barrett Bowling Center.

DelDonno left the number 2 pin up on a light hit. He finished the night with a 158-152—609 total.

Bowling for B and B Television team of the Mountain League, DelDonno had searched the bowling center for a ball to suit him as his was in for repairs. During the last match he found one that suited him and ripped to the 299 game. His average? It's 181.

Career Near Finish For Tom Brewer

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Tom Brewer, 31-year-old right-hander who won 19 games for Boston in 1956, left the camp of the Red Sox Thursday, his baseball career apparently ended.

Brewer, idled most of last season with a shoulder injury, had been declared a free agent during the winter. He came here to train with the Sox this spring, hopeful his arm would respond. It didn't.

Brewer, who had an 88-80 record in seven seasons with the Sox, left for his home in Cheraw, S.C., saying he had no immediate plans.

RAY HARTMANN & SONS
ANNOUNCE THE FRANCHISE FOR McCULLOCH

ROGER HARTMANN, and CLYDE HALLETT, of Ray Hartmann & Sons announced today the exclusive franchise for McCulloch products. McCulloch, number one in world sales with home offices in Los Angeles, California, are manufacturers of the famous McCulloch chain saws, brush cutters, weed cutters, earth drills and roto bit pruners.

Roger Hartmann, pictured above, started in the lawn mower repair business 13 years ago as a hobbyist. Roger attended East Stroudsburg College financing it on the wages he earned on repair work. Roger eventually became a technician for caterpillar tractors in Peoria, Illinois where he lived and worked. Roger had a shop in Peoria while he was there and also attended Bradley University. He is a resident of Minisink Hills, and is married to the former Dolores Keller. They have three children, Gary 3, Cindy 2, and Brenda 6 Months. (Photo by Les Carlton)

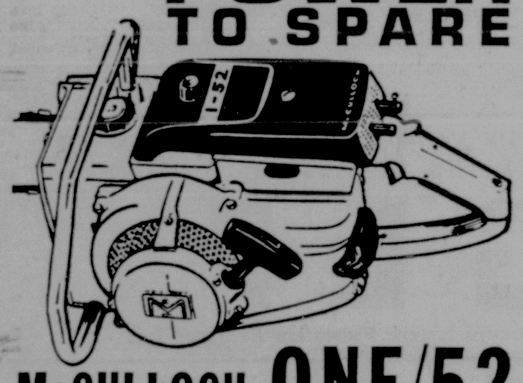

Clyde Hallett, pictured above just started with Roger, at Ray Hartmann & Sons. He has had extensive experience in machinery operation and repair. He is a native of Marshalls Creek and a graduate of East Stroudsburg High School. He has had former employment with Harvey Huffman of Marshalls Creek and Metropolitan Edison. He is married to the former Phyllis Hartmann and has one child, Saglinda Mae, born on the 15th of March this year. (Photo by Les Carlton)

Ron Focke, is another new man to the Ray Hartmann & Sons organization. Ron has had extensive experience in the heavy equipment operation and maintenance line. He worked formerly with James D. McCULLOCH BP-1

THE REVOLUTIONARY NEW CHAIN SAW THAT MEETS YOUR EVERY NEE

From the moment you take the new McCulloch BP-1 in hand, you'll notice advancement not found in any other chain saw. First, there is no perceptible vibration from this revolutionary balanced-piston engine. At top cutting speeds the saw actually feels lighter than it is—only 15 pounds, less bar and chain. It is so compact, so carefully balanced, so smooth in its performance, you will hardly believe you are using a chain saw. Yet, the BP-1 delivers professional saw performance —more power in fact than most conventional chain saws five or six pounds heavier. Many revolutionary design features contribute to the amazing performance of this new saw. From the gear case out to the tip of the bar you'll find an exclusive new chain and bar combination called Auto-Mac. The Auto-Mac bar is lighter, designed especially to match the lightweight BP-1 engine so that at all cutting angles the balance between power unit and bar is close to perfect. Chain sharpening is done automatically at the touch of a button so there is no need for time-consuming hand filing. The Auto-Mac bar oils itself automatically too, making it the most economical, most efficient bar ever designed. Auto-Mac is the only cutter bar with sprockets at both ends to guide the chain smoothly and evenly through every cutting job. A new carburetor utilizing fuel injection principles sprays fuel into the engine. The balance piston then pumps this fuel charge in a supercharging action direct to the combustion chamber to boost power and efficiency. A special new muffler made of corrosion-resistant steel effectively suppresses high-frequency engine noise. For convenience the muffler is placed at the top and front of the saw to direct exhaust pressures and sawdust away from the operator. These are just a few reasons why the McCulloch BP-1 is the world's most advanced chain saw. Other features include fingertip controls, rubber covered pistol grip, and padded wrap around handle-bar. We invite you to try the saw in action at Ray Hartmann & Son today and experience why the new BP-1 is acknowledged as a major breakthrough in chain saw design.

WHY BUY McCULLOCH?

McCulloch chain saws, with nine great models for '62 are one of the world's most dependable saws. They have compact design and balanced handling. Quick starts are obtained through a special combustion chamber, carburetion, and ignition system. A new raised fuel tank makes the saw 40 degrees cooler inside. The entire ignition system is weather-proofed. Fuel filtering for dust and wood shavings has been improved. Rubber padded handles reduce vibration. A positive diaphragm carburetor operates in any position. A new flocked screen air cleaner filters better. Chrome-plated spring steel rings assure a better seal. The compact control panel gives fingertip access to throttle, ignition switch, oiler and choke. An exclusive heat shielding town & country muffler with two-positions reduces noise 50%. Has a loop-scavenged 3rd port intake and reed system. Best of all are the prices, starting at $149.95, with full 16-inch bar.

McCULLOCH ONE/72
SPEED AND POWER
FOR LIGHT, TOUCH CUTTING

A high-speed, direct drive professional model for production felling, bucking, and pulp logging. Horizontal cylinder design cuts size and weight, reduces vibration. Exclusive shock mounted handle frame reduces fatigue. Fast starting and easy handling. Insulated fuel tank keeps fuel 40° cooler. Rear air intake ducts insure maximum flow of clean air into carburetor. Two-position Town & Country muffler cuts sound in town, opens up in the country. Fingertip controls—throttle, ignition, choke.

Firm Furnishings Alliance

CHICAGO—Decoration and durability have formed a firm home furnishings alliance in the new vinyl flooring introduced by The Congoleum-Nairn Inc. company.

Furnishings Market, Chicago.

Top notch designs and patterns have been given new use and function, and products acclaimed for easy care and maintenance are treated to new scope in pattern and color.

Preferred design is added to practical performance in the new "Grecian Gold" presentation in the NoScrub DeLuxe line. Homemakers who favor the growing trend for flooring in white, gold or metallic chip effects will find all three features in this new design. It consists of a gold veined Roman marble pattern dusted with a "flitter" effect in miniscule gold metallic chips. It is available in Goodyear's unique six-foot wide vinyl flooring and in nine inches by nine inches tile.

At the same time, a special talent has been added to the entire NoScrub DeLuxe line to make it usable for on-grade installations. Noted for its decorative range as well as long wear and easy care, the product's new on-grade feature keeps pace with the ever-growing popularity of the base-

Linotile

LINOTILE, often confused with linoleum tile, is actually an extremely durable, special process type of smooth surface flooring that is designed for heavy traffic areas.

House On Hilltop Knows Every Season Outdoors

HIGH on a hillside overlooking the distant dome of the capitol in Harrisburg, Pa., sits a house that knows every season outdoors, but only one indoors.

A wall of windows spanning the living room of the Drexel Hills home of Dr. and Mrs. William S. Davis makes the changing colors of the landscape part of the room's decor, but electric heat and air conditioning keep the house comfortable inside, no matter what the season.

Floors Always Warm

The two small Davis boys are allowed to play on the floor all winter without fear of catching cold from drafts or cold floors. Electric heat and thorough mineral wool insulation keep the house comfortably draft-free and the floors warm to the touch.

"When I was a child, Mother was always saying, 'Get right up off that floor or you'll catch cold'," Mrs. Davis recalls. "I'm glad that I don't have to say that to my children."

With individual thermostats for each room, Mrs. Davis keeps the bedrooms and kitchen comfortably cool, while the living room and the play room remain warm.

Pale green draperies that frame the living room windows point up another reason Mrs. Davis likes electric heat. Although they have been up since the family moved in three years ago, the draperies look as fresh as a new blade of grass.

Clean and Cool

In another electrically heated house two doors away, Mrs. William Raves, wife of a Harrisburg engineer and mother of two teen-age boys, adds credence to the cleanliness concept of electric heating. Her draperies, too, have been up for three years, yet they're still snowy white.

"When I know the difference between electric heat and other kinds of heating systems," says Mrs. Raves, "so I know the difference. Electric heat is cleaner and more comfortable—quieter, too."

With a white roof to bounce off the sun's rays and complete mineral wool insulation in walls, ceilings, and floors, their house stays comfortably cool all summer, Mrs. Raves says. "I wish we had air conditioning to keep it as clean in summer as it is in winter, though," she adds.

Electrically Heated Homes

SINCE an electric heating system often costs less to install than other types of heating, the home owner can save as much as $100 a year on mortgage payments alone. A Pennsylvania family who chose electric heat, saved $1500 on installation costs, plus $90 a year interest charges on that amount.

WHAT'S a wooly-ankled, muffler-throated, blue-toed sniffler? Give up? It's a bird whose nest is a house that's badly insulated, if at all.

This bird wears heavy socks, fleece-lined slippers, and outdoor clothing all winter long in his own living room, trying to escape the discomfort of cold floors and chill drafts that sweep through the house even when all doors and windows are tightly closed.

Today, the "sniffler" is coming closer to extinction, thanks to such things as modern electric heating and the insulation needed to make it practical.

The drafts "sniffers" suffer from are the result of inadequately-insulated walls that get as cold as a tombstone. When heated air touches them, it cools off and drops rapidly, scudding across the floor in a chilling draft.

When walls are insulated according to Quality Home Requirements of the National Mineral Wool Insulation Association, batts or blankets labeled R-11 or R-13 wool, they stay warm and drafts are eliminated.

In electrically heated homes, the same standard calls for R-19 batts in ceilings and R-13 batts in floors over unheated areas, or this equivalent in blown-in mineral wool. The "R" number indicates the resistance to the flow of heat the mineral wool is engineered to provide.

Individual Control of Room Temp

INDIVIDUAL room temperature control is one of the most important features of electric heating. Bedroom thermostats, for instance, can be set to suit each sleeper instead of at some "average" temperature that isn't quite right for anyone.

During the day, the children can play and nap in a warm room, while Mother cooks in a cool kitchen. Day or night, thermostats in rooms not being used can be turned down for the sake of economy.

Best of all, say families who live in electrically heated homes, are the warm bathrooms. During Spring and Fall, when the weather's warm enough to have no heat, but mornings are often chilly, the bathroom thermostat can be turned up to make bathing a pleasure instead of a test of endurance.

No matter what room temperatures are preferred, thorough mineral wool insulation installed in houses with electric heat prevents drafts and helps maintain even, comfortable warmth.

Sunken Two-Story Provides New Dramatic Liveability

FREQUENTLY a departure from conventional home architecture—such as this dramatic four-bedroom model — yields some points in praticality to a striking design. Not so in this case.

Architect Rudolph A. Matern instead has retained the basic advantages of both a ranch and a two-story in House of the Week B-79.

"Call it what you like," Matern said. "A sunken two-story would be a good description. Raised ranch is another. The main point is, there are 1,900 square feet of possible habitable area within about an 1,100 square foot perimeter."

Another advantage of the design is that nearly the entire lower level can be left unfinished and completed later, room by room.

In effect, the lower level is simply a well-designed basement. Raised above the grade level, however, it doesn't have any of the living aspects of a basement—only the economical advantage of basement-type construction, that is, within the foundation walls.

The upper level contains 1,097 square feet of living area; the lower level 803 square feet excluding the garage and utility area. Its dimensions are 44 feet five inches wide by 25 feet four inches deep.

Mid-level foyers, both front and rear, add another dramatic note to the design as well as serving a functional purpose. They route traffic through the home with remarkable efficiency. There never is a need to go through the upper level to get to the lower, and vice versa.

Spacious glass areas provide plenty of natural lighting in the places where it's needed—kitchen, family room, living room and dining room. The kitchen, large (14 feet 3 inches by 11 feet ten inches) and well laid out, has a breakfast area on a well-lighted balcony.

Additional Details

There are plenty of interior features to recommend this house, but its attractive, up to the minute exterior deserves further mention first.

Of particular note is the wood grill extending from ground to roof in front of the sunken patio off the lower level front bedroom. Iron rails protect the open area on the ends, and another grill on the opposite side of the front door completes the design.

Past the broad front windows, accented with their own grill-type construction, and around to the side of the house is another strikrace on the ground level leads through sliding glass doors to the family room.

Inside, B-78 is plainly zoned for ingly different exterior feature—the large deck porch.

The porch adds another dimension, height, to conventional indoor-outdoor living design. The combination fireplace and barbecue is another attractive indoor-outdoor feature.

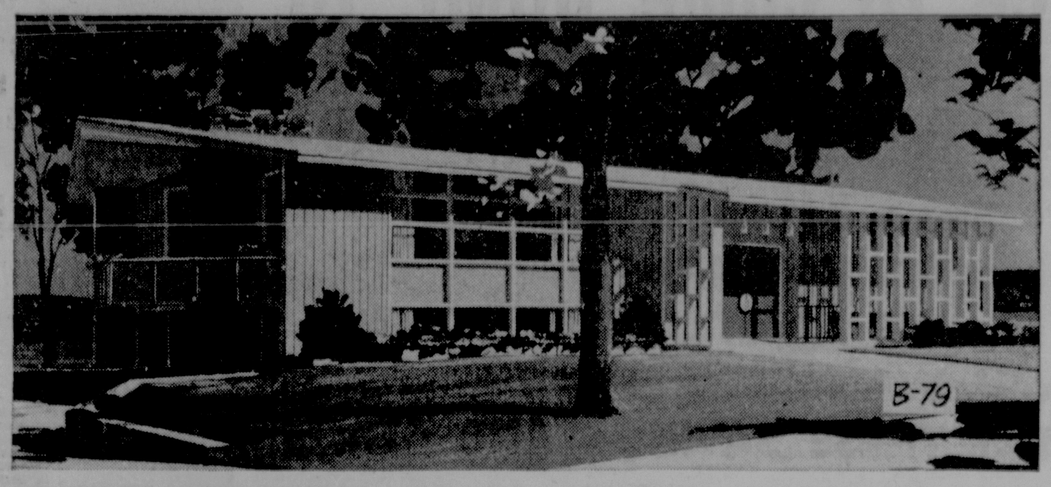

Outdoor living is not confined to the deck porch, however. A tercomfortable and efficient living with the bedrooms on one side, the living area on the other and the kitchen in the center convenient to all parts of both levels.

Both levels feature an open design in their living and entertainment areas. The living room-dining room portion of the upper level, in fact, has nearly 400 square feet of spaciousness not counting the deck porch which is entered through sliding glass doors from both rooms.

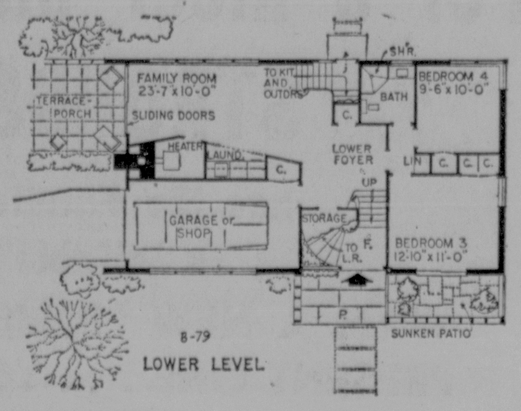

On the lower level, the family room not only has indoor access from the kitchen but also from the rear service entrance as well as its grade level entrance from the terrace.

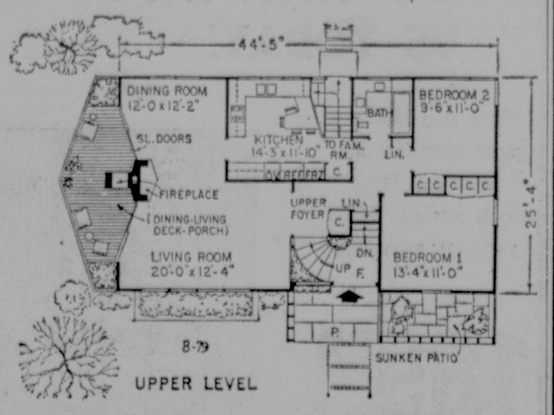

The garage is conveniently located also—up a few steps to the living room, or across the lower foyer to the kitchen steps.

Storage space is plentiful in B-79. All the bedrooms have one or more large closets; linen closets are convenient to both bathrooms; both foyers have handy coat closets; the kitchen has a spacious broom closet; there is a storage closet in the garage and bonus storage space beneath the circular stair on the lower level.

DRAMATICALLY DIFFERENT—The sunken two-story design of this four-bedroom house combines basic advantages of both the ranch and the two-story. Lower level can remain unfinished until needed. Striking wood grill work, large glass areas and unusual deck porch are key features of handsome exterior.

MID-LEVEL FOYER—Circular staircase accentuated with planters, large window and balcony add charm to the spacious living room. Besides providing a dramatic touch, mid-level foyer serves practical function of routing traffic efficiently to both levels of sunken two-story home.

Which Type Electric Heating Is Best?

WHICH type of electric heating system is best? It depends, say heating authorities. No single heating system is "best" for every family or house.

Factors that govern the type of electric heating chosen by a family include the style of house, whether it is under construction or being remodeled, as well as the family's individual needs and preferences.

It's wise to remember, however, that whatever type of electric heating system is chosen, proper insulation is necessary to make the most of the many benefits provided by this modern way to heat.

Existing houses can now be insulated quickly and easily with a special type of mineral wool blown into walls, ceiling and floor areas. Batts or blankets of mineral wool are usually installed in new homes during construction.

Here are brief descriptions of the most popular types of electric heating systems:

1. Baseboard. Units of this type are installed along outside walls of a room close to the floor, and blended into the baseboard.

2. Ceiling coils. A gentle, even flow of heat radiates from hidden heating cables embedded in the ceiling plaster.

3. Radiant wall panels. These thin units fit flush in walls.

4. Electric furnace. A compact central heating unit distributes warm air throughout a house through ducts.

Dress-Up Garden Fencing With Appropriate Plants

WHETHER you plan to put up a fence for practical purposes such as a property divider or for privacy, or a fence for purely decorative reasons — be sure to give serious thought to what's already planted and what you plan to plant later.

If vines that climb with twining stems are to be grown, an open-work sort of fence will be needed. Any of the small-flowered clematis, so delicate in growth as well as flower, will be attractive on a simple picket fence.

A particularly sturdy fence is needed for heavy, woody vines such as wisteria or trumpet creeper. Either a hurdle or three-rail fence will be strong enough to support their heavy growth. They will need severe pruning each year, however, to keep them from growing too rampant.

Roses, on the other hand, are suitable for several kinds of fencing. They are equally at home on a low post-and-rail fence, which serves only as a boundary marker, or on a high board fence erected as a screen. If allowed to grow naturally, the ramblers with thin pliable canes will make an informal mass on a low fence.

Fences also make fine backgrounds for various other types of planting. A rose bed, for example, would be much enhanced by the addition of a simple picket fence behind it. A taller fence with solid base boards and small lattice panels above will make an interesting background for a planting of tall perennials like delphinium and hollyhock. A specimen tree such as an apple or weeping cherry, planted behind either type of fence, will complete the picture and add both character and beauty to the garden scheme.

THE VIEW FROM THE STREET—A house need not be in the luxury class to have the beautiful restful look afforded by quality landscaping. A property can be planted with a minimum budget, and for minimum care later, yet give a luxuriously-landscaped look to the home.

40 Million Families Turning Toward Outdoors

By Virginia Eicholtz

RIGHT about now some 40 million families are turning their green thoughts and greener spending money on the great outdoors. Among other things, they will buy around $60 million worth of outdoor cooking equipment, $250 million worth of picnicware and a spectacular $3 billion in lawn and garden equipment.

They will also be shopping for furnishings for the swimming pool, for boats and summer homes, for camping trips and weekends at the seashore.

But this year's outlook for the consumer for outdoor accessories will be different than it was for her forebears. More sophisticated in living habits and tastes, she can expect less glitter, more solid practical products and will find them.

Because she will be considerably more mobile due to added leisure and shorter work weeks, she will prefer qualities like portability and very likely she can expect to pay more for it.

Because she is learning that patio and backyard living outdoors can be almost as elegant as indoors and should certainly be as comfortable—she will likely choose more formal tableware and similar serving appointments.

One of my favorite and best informed merchandising friends keeps talking of the "crying need for new products." "The consumer is changing," says he, "we've got to change with her." The future and continued growth of home furnishings lies in finding really new product answers in new market areas now shaping up.

My friend wasn't being grandiose.

The Federal Reserve cites five new and influential buying markets for the sixties:

Teenagers: they spend $6 billion annually. Although most of it goes for sports, clothing, food, records, movies and hobbies—well over 25 per cent either influence family purchases or are themselves in the market for home furnishings (average age of 1962's bride is 18.)

Those 65 and older: they spend $30 billion on housing, home furnishings, food and medical care primarily.

A bachelor market: boasting an income of $30 billion, spends heavily on clothing, entertainment and food and lives mainly in the city.

The so-called country-club set: made up of seven million families with incomes of $10,000 and over, is most receptive to new products in most categories.

Working wives: now earning $30 billion are spending more independently than ever before. Their main interest includes clothing, personal care, home furnishings and entertainment.

Could America be selling itself short on new markets in our supreme, all-encompassing effort to mass merchandise the products we already have on hand? Think about it. Call on any product development people. You may be surprised at the ideas you turn up.

If you think the age of personalized service is dead—you will likely find a little comfort in the fact that one vanguard department store (Dallas' Nieman-Marcus) recently instituted a secret service.

It seems that many of their customers send gifts to kings, shahs, maharajahs, prime ministers and other notables and insist on complete secrecy. Confidential orders may be sent to officer G-7 reports the store with great seriousness.

These will be handled by one of three senior officers of our firm. No one else in the store will know of the transaction. Furthermore, no written bill will be sent, just billing by telephone. The price of this new super-secret service: just one per cent extra per purchase!

Can one plastic material discovery change Mrs. Consumer's views of the whole housewares market. The technical experts think its very possible and unhesitatingly name four-year-old polypropylene as the newcomer with the big future.

Not only has it been predicted as a replacement for other plastics in certain product uses, but also in completely new product uses where metal, glass and pressed board might have been the tradition.

Polypropylene is tough, rigid, boil-proof, stain proof, odor-proof and lightweight. It is resistant to chemicals, crack resistant. Most interesting of all, is its high resistance to flexing fatigue.

More than two dozen housewares already use polypropydene in varied ways: the lids of carafes, housing on electric floor polishers, carpet sweepers, dinnerware accessories, such as pitcher, mugs, on ice bucket closings, in canisters and tumblers, bowls and clothes hampers. Latest additions are polypropylene chairs in price ranges from $5.44 to $15.95.

Beautiful Ranch Type Brings Outdoors Inside All Year

Spacious Patio Areas Gives Feeling Of Freedom

PATIOS ON three sides make outdoor living areas as much a part of the actual design of this modest ranch as any of its other features.

The outdoor areas—a play terrace plus front and rear patios—not only add much to the 1,540 square feet of indoor space but also give touches of elegance usually reserved for more expensive homes.

"The house not only has the appearance of a luxury home," said architect Samuel Paul, "it functions like one as well."

A glass wall (with sliding glass doors) separates the patio and the 19 feet by 13 feet 4 inches living room; and a brick fireplace wall in the living room extends onto the patio to form the barbecue. The effect is one large indoor-outdoor relaxing and entertaining area.

The 14 feet by 11 feet master bedroom with its adjoining bath also opens on the patio—a deft touch by an architect with an eye for elegance as well as practical convenience.

From the kitchen, a house-wife can supervise children playing either on the large play terrace or the front patio. The kitchen "control point" also has access to the garage, basement and dining room, and through the glass doors to the rear patio.

The two children's bedrooms and main bath are situated to provide privacy from activities in the living room.

Additional Details

The living room has a cathedral ceiling formed by the underside of the sloping roof rafters. Light fixtures (and air conditioning ducts, if desired) are housed in a wide, flat light cove placed atop the 8 feet high interior living room wall and extending 12 inches into the room.

In the foyer, the light cove becomes a suspended canopy over the archway to the living room. The foyer ceiling is the same type as the living room, sloping downward from the peak which disappears above the light cove.

Note the abundance of closets and storage space in B-65. The master bedroom has two large sliding-door closets; the other bedrooms one each; two roomy closets off the entrance foyer; and a handy closet in the family room for the toys, games and other paraphernalia that invariably collects there. The storage space in the garage off the play terrace is for garden equipment.

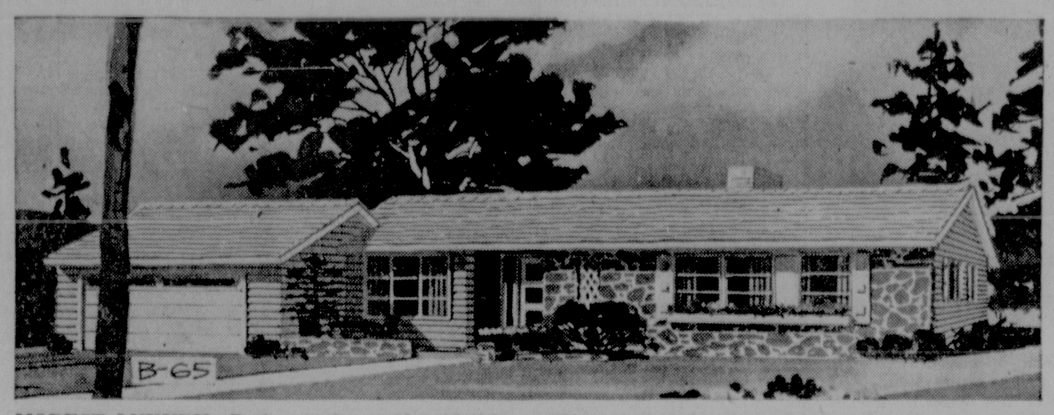

The front patio, with its low, random ashlar wall, lends itself to a variety of uses. Architect Paul suggests it would be an ideal setting for sculpture, or possibly a showplace for favorite shrubs.

Paul notes an additional feature of the house, not apparent to most laymen. Room widths have been planned to use stock lengths of floor and ceiling joists, thus holding cutting time, waste and framing time to a minimum.

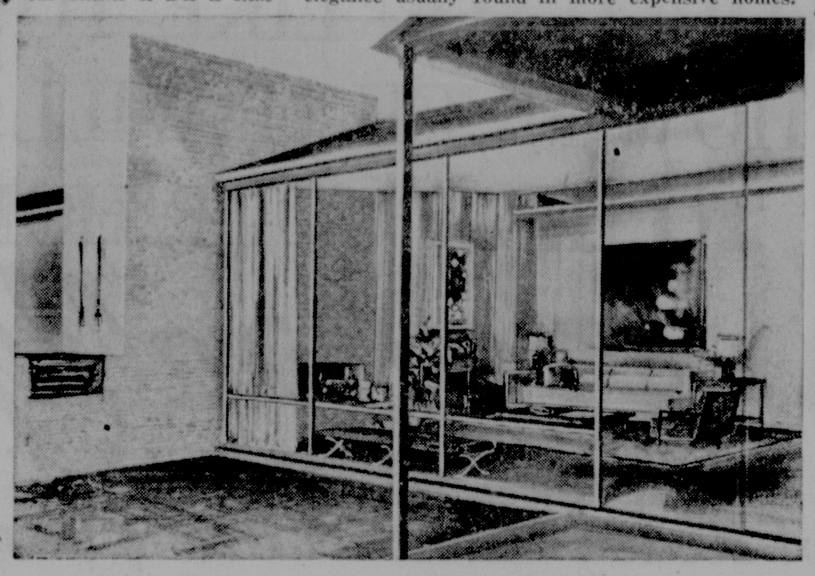

The plan suggests only one of a number of possible layouts for the basement. This one provides a laundry room, basement toilet and recreation room, plus abundant storage closet space.

The exterior of B-65 is stone veneer and horizontal siding, with asphalt shingle specified for the roof.

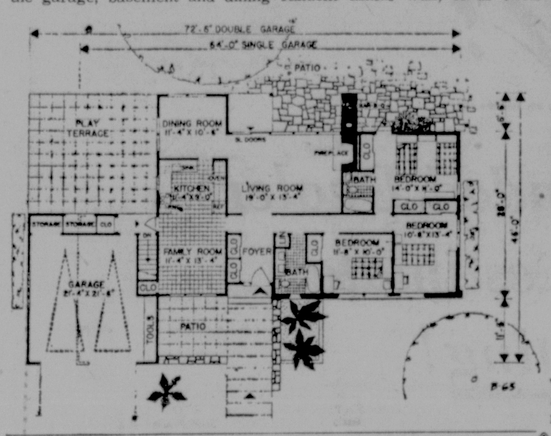

Its overall dimensions are 46 feet deep by 72 feet 6 inches wide with the double garage; a single garage would reduce the width to 64 feet. Paul recommends a plot of about 80 feet by 100 feet to take fullest advantage of the outdoor living features.

MODEST LUXURY—Patio on three sides of this seven-room ranch are designed to integrate indoor and outdoor living areas, with a resulting air of elegance usually found in more expensive homes. The exterior features stone veneer in front and horizontal siding elsewhere, with a glass wall between the living room and rear patio.

GRACIOUS LIVING—A brick fireplace wall in the living room, extending out on the patio to form an outdoor barbecue, is one of the features incorporated in this ranch. Artist's conception also shows glass wall with sliding glass doors between living room and rear patio which furthers indoor-outdoor relationship.

Oiled Finishes Are Popular

OILED finishes are increasingly popular for modern furniture, and here's the way to go about it. Be sure that the wood has been sanded as smooth as possible. Spread boiled linseed oil liberally on the surface with a thick pad of folded cloth, and allow the oil to soak in until no more can be absorbed. Rub the surface again with the pad, working the oil down into the pores. Use clean cloths to wipe off any surplus oil, and let dry over night. Repeat the entire process a minimum of twice more. The greater the number of coats, the more attractive and durable the finish.

Don't Forget Acoustics

BUILDING a home? Don't forget to include a Cushiontone acoustical ceiling in the kitchen, family room and other potentially noisy areas to insure against irritating household clatter. These attractive, easy-to-care-for ceilings do a lot to improve hearing conditions, and at the same time eliminate the old problem of cracking and chipping that often occurs with ordinary ceilings as the house settles.

Surfaces Of Vinyl

SURFACES of some vinyl sheet floors and linoleum are embossed slightly to heighten the three-dimensional feeling.

Testing Timbers

HEAVY wood timbers are safer than steel when exposed to high temperatures in fires in schools and commercial buildings. Reason is that steel melts and distorts out of shape when subjected to great heat while wood merely chars over but holds its shape for long periods under severe fire.

Heat Zoning Is Answer To Home Comfort Problem

ONLY a robot would be pleased with a constant household temperature, unvarying from room to room. But unlike the robot, people constantly change their pace of living, wear clothes of different weights and enjoy different degrees of warmth according to health and moods.

Too many homes today, says the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, are hampered for comfortable living by a heating arrangement more satisfactory to a robot than people.

Because the heating system is geared to only one thermostatic control, a home's occupants are forced to withstand more warmth than needed in some rooms in order to be comfortable in others. The result is not only discomfort, but money lost in fuel bills.

The solution, the Bureau advises, is to 'zone' the heading system according to different living areas. Each area is then heated only as much or little as you desire.

Though it can be done with all systems, zoning is most easily and inexpensively adapted to hydronic heating, i.e., hot water circulated through piping in baseboard walls, floors or ceilings. The piping layouts can easily be separated, each with its own control.

Carefully designed hydronic heat zoning is the ultimate refinement in heating, providing the right temperature for each room.

THE EXTERIOR OF A HOME can be as comfortable and valuable as the owner makes it. Home improvement through landscaping will help bring a higher price for the homeowner when he's ready to sell. Shade trees, annuals and perenials as well as shrubs of all kinds enhance the home property.

Mobile Homes Have Won Respect

LOUISVILLE, KY.—"The gypsy feeling is all but gone from the mobile home industry," Betty Jennings, mobile home design consultant for United States Plywood Corporation, told the radio audience in a recent interview here.

"Mobile homes have won the public's respect as manufacturers improve their design and make them both liveable and lovely," said Miss Jennings who coordinates U. S. Plywood materials, such as fine hardwood plywood paneling, with current design trends in the mobile home industry.

Miss Jennings told the audience on the "Women's Way" program that the mobile home of today "is a real home—designed for a cross-section of our population from people with children to retired couples, service families and young businessmen who find they must follow their job from city to city."

She described in some detail the "retirement village" featured in the national mobile home show.

"The mobile home solves many problems for retired couples. They are not tied to a certain area. They can move to one part of the country and, if they don't like it, they can move on to more congenial surroundings. And they can do all this without really 'tearing up their roots.' They will retain the same home, the same setting for the personal belongings of a lifetime."

Pointing out that some mobile homes have up to four bedrooms, Miss Jennings said that designs for retired couples eliminated extra sleeping space and expanded on such luxuries as living-dining areas and big walk-in closets.

In our restless economy, more young men working for big companies are investing in a mobile home so that they can move the house with the jobs, she added. Similarly service families are enabled to follow the serviceman from post to post without disrupting family life.

Questioned by mistress-of-ceremonies Louise Wyler how the new, more elaborately decorated mobile homes stand up to the bumps, swaying and general wear-and-tear of life on the highway, Miss Jennings said that this factor is one reason why more and more manufacturers are running to paneled living quarters for the home on wheels.

"Plywood pound for pound actually has more structural strength than steel," she explained. "It can take the wracking of movement as no other decorative wall material can. Manufacturers are using hardwood plywood for walls, ceilings and cabinets—in fact for virtually the whole interior — in many of the new mobile home models.

"In addition to the strength factor, hardwood plywood gives the mobile home owner the warmth and beauty of wood grain—a decorative feature that is just as beautiful in the home on wheels as it is in the orthodox "stationary' living room."

THE incomparable beauty of wood paneling is one reason for its wide popularity.

Housewife Dreams Of Nice Floors

EVERY housewife dreams of a colorful floor that does not show dirt, scuff marks, spilled foods and beverages, and which requires a minimum of maintenance. Spatter finishes, sometimes called spatter-dash, provide an easy way to fulfill this dream.

This finish consists of a coat of tough quality floor enamel in the color of your choice, which is spattered at random with one or more other colors of this durable finish.

If your present painted floor is in good condition, and the colors bright and true, there is no need to repaint. But be sure that it is free of dirt, wax, polish and grease. Mop it clean and let it dry before proceeding. If the floor has not been painted previously or if the old paint is in poor condition, then apply floor enamel in the manner to be described later on.

To get the spatters, here's what you do. Dip a brush in a can of the first color you want for the polka dot effect. Holding the brush in your right hand with the bristle pointed up, strike the metal band that holds the bristles—the technical name is ferrule — against a stick held in the other hand.

For small spatters, the brush should not be fully loaded and the stick against which it is struck should be held about a foot from the floor. For larger spatters, fill the brush fully and hold the stick three feet or so above the floor.

Be sure to protect the walls and baseboard with newspaper held in place with masking tape.

If you want the spatters to consist of several colors, wait until each color has dried before going ahead to the next one. You may want the spots of the first color to be large and those of the second to be small, so vary the height accordingly.

If it is necessary to enamel the entire floor because it is unpainted or in poor condition, here's the way to go about it after making sure that is is completely clean. Where paint has worn away, sand the surrounding edges so that the spot priming will not raise the level of the finish. Then apply the enamel to these bare spots thinned in accordance with label instructions. Thin the enamel the same way if you are doing the entire floor. After the first coat has dried, apply one or two coats of the chosen color.

Floor enamels can be applied with brush or roller. The easiest way is to use a long-handled roller that makes it unnecessary to bend or kneel. Apply the enamel in two foot strokes running the length of the room, overlapping slightly. Be sure that you paint with a door behind you so that you don't paint yourself into a corner.

Enamel Starts 10 Steps To Beauty In Bathroom

THERE ARE 10 steps to bathroom beauty, and they start with quality enamel. Enamel, because it's the best finish for this room where walls and ceilings must be able to resist frequent washing and the moisture that's constantly in the air. Quality—because only quality enamel made by a reputable manufacturer has adequate hiding power, long life and color retention and can withstand constant scrubbing.

Second is your choice of colors. Flattery is always welcome in the early morning. The most flattering wall colors belong to the pink, peach, rose and coral families which reflect light that gives us a bright, healthy look. Gold and pure green are also good selections but yellow-greens should be avoided; they are most unflattering.

Third is the knowledge that you can choose from any of the hundreds of colors that modern paint tinting systems enable your dealer to produce for you at your request. Custom colors are yours for the asking.

Fourth, don't be stipple or stencil shy. Stippled walls give a feeling of depth. After your freshly enamelled walls have dried, select a contrasting color and apply with a stippling roller or a sponge. Stencils provide an easy way to dress up cabinets and accessories. You can make your own stencils or buy them ready made at most paint or art supply stores. Secure them firmly to the dry surface with masking tape and use a stencil brush to apply the color. Remove the stencil, and enjoy your handiwork.

Fifth is the matter of lighting. Incandescent bulbs give a warmer, more flattering light than do standard cool white fluorescent tubes which tend to drain the red from lips and cheeks. If you prefer fluorescent lighting, select tubes known as deluxe cool or warm white or soft white. There are also pink and peach tubes that are ideal for use near mirrors.

Sixth is the matter of size. Most bathrooms are small, but they can be made to look larger if they are painted in light tints of the colors suggested earlier as being most suitable. A room painted pink would look larger than one done in pure red.

Seventh is the matter of ceilings. A white ceiling will look higher than one enamelled a deep color. If you want color overhead, choose a paler tint of the wall color. If you don't mind a lower-looking ceiling, paint yours a darker shade of the wall color.

Eighth—your fabric accessories. Two different colors in various shades and tints will look beautiful; more than two can be distracting. Patterns that are not too loud or too busy are attractive, but don't go overboard.

Ninth is the need for proper surface preparation. Wash away any dirt or soap film with detergent or cleanser, taking care to rinse well after cleaning. Enamel will not adhere to a soapy or greasy wall. Fill cracks or holes with spackling compound, let dry, then sand smooth and prime, if the label on the enamel so advises.

Tenth is the actual application of the enamel. Enamel can be applied by brush or roller. If you use a brush, flow the enamel on freely from a fully loaded brush. Without reloading the brush, cross stroke to be sure that you leave no spots uncovered. Finally, pick up any sags or drips with the tip of a nearly dry brush.

Medicine Cabinets Must Be Safe

EVERY year approximately 250-thousand persons in the United States, mostly children, are victims of accidental poisoning. Accidental poisoning is said to kill more young children than polio, diptheria and scarlet fever combined.

Health authorities are insistent that drug products and otherwise dangerous substances. Should be stored in a place where they will be inaccessible to small children.

For this reason, several manufacturers of medicine cabinets offer special protection against such tragic mishaps. A special model, says the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, prevents little children from getting into one or more small chests or compartments designated for storage of dangerous medicines.

Thus the medicine cabinet provides in one handsome unit a place for the storage of relatively harmless materials at the most convenient place in the bathroom, and also a safety chest which cannot be opened by small children.

Newest models in medicine cabinets are noteworthy for increased mirror area and better lighting with flanking flourescent or overhead light tubes. Some models have flanking mirrored doors that open to provide an additional side view. Behind the side mirrors is more storage space.

Unusual Four-Level Split Design Cuts Excavation Cost

RAISED SPLIT LEVEL—The lowest level of this three-bedroom house is raised, all but eliminating excavation cost as well as providing additional living area. House contains 2,005 square feet of living area in a basic ground cover of 1,289 square feet and dimensions of 53' wide by 35' 4" deep including balconies.

FLOOR PLAN—Unusual adaption of split level design creates 2,005 square feet of living area in basic ground cover of 1,289 square feet. This doesn't include 303 square feet in balconies and living room deck. Dimensions, including balconies, are 53' wide by 35' 4" deep. Note extremely broad roof overhang.

NOT TOO many years ago some unnamed architect took a long look at a hillside lot, scratched his head, sat down to his drawing board and, not too surprisingly under the circumstances, designed a split-level house.

As everyone is aware, the split-level plan caught on for a number of reasons, combining as it does the best elements of both the two-story and the ranch.

But the fact remains it was intended originally for a sloping lot, and sometimes the high cost of adapting level ground to split-level specifications makes it hardly worth the effort.

This striking three (or four) bedroom split, on the other hand, was designed to eliminated 90 per cent of the customary and costly dirt moving. This refinement, plus other cost-cutting features which were accomplished without sacrificing a whit of livability, make it worthy of selection as House of the Week. It is plan J-12 in the series, designed by architect Samuel Paul.

The house contains three full baths, a large reception foyer, a kitchen-breakfast room, dining room, family room, study (or fourth bedroom), living room with a dramatic corner fireplace and other touches of elegance such as balconies off all three upper level bedrooms and a covered living room deck.

The remarkable thing is that all this living area—2,005 square feet within the enclosing walls—is designed into a basic area of only 1,289 square feet of ground cover, the area of the living and sleeping levels. Its dimensions, including the balconies, are a modest 53 feet wide by 35 feet 4 inches deep, which means it would fit comfortably on a 70 feet by 100 feet lot.

This four-level house has no cellar, in the usual sense, and that's the key to its economical construction.

The lowest level (garage, heater room, storage and hobby room) is a basement, but it has been raised so that its large windows are above grade and require no areaways; thus it, too, constitutes 571 square feet of living area in the strictest sense. Architect Paul refers to the design as a "raised split-level."

Additional Details

The main entrance is on the 716-square-foot ground level. Its double doors open to a spacious reception foyer which has double closets; and an adjoining full bath serves nicely as a powder room.

The stair to the living room is at the right, and to the left is the laundry and study. The study is equipped with a large closet, and with the full bath practically adjacent to it could easily become a fourth bedroom or guest room.

Straight ahead from the foyer is a huge family room—297 square feet of airy informal space with glass doors leading to a rear patio that stretches the entire width of the house. Note also the two big closets in the family room — a family man himself, architect Paul is well aware of the toys, games and other paraphernalia that invariably collect in this well-used room.

A second stair with an open-work rail connects the family room to the kitchen - breakfast room, visually and functionally interlacing the two informal zones into a graceful expanse of 42 feet.

An island range, with a counter top and hood, not only divides the kitchen and breakfast area effectively but also forms a square work area which is the ultimate in step saving. And don't overlook the large pantry closet, or the long "bonus" counter between it and the refrigerator.

A floor to ceiling glass wall, with sliding glass doors leading to the covered deck, complements the glamorous fireplace and wrought iron rail at the opposite end of the living room. The rear of the fireplace, incidentally, forms an attractive brick wall both in the foyer and along the main stair.

Upstairs, all three bedrooms are well sized, and the balconies adjoining each of them provide real luxury — of the inexpensive type. The front balcony, 27' long, forms a covered front porch over the main entry.

Brand New Panels And Doors Improve The Home

TODAY'S accent on casual living has inspired the modern housewife to seek easy-to-clean-and-maintain homebuilding products which will make her day's work easier and shorter.

Housewives agree that the most difficult and time-consuming phase of home cleaning is caring for walls and doors. Kitchen walls are especially difficult to maintain, and usually require re-painting or re-finishing every two years.

After extensive research and product testing, a leading wood products manufacturer has now developed a new line of prefinished plywood paneling and matching flush doors with the warmth and beauty of expensive hand-rubbed wood.

Tests by a leading independent laboratory prove that their beautiful grain finishes will not scuff, fade or stain and can be washed or cleaned with any common detergent.

The name "Lifeclad" has been given this product by Simpson Timber Company the manufacturer, because the paneling and doors are protected by a tough vinyl surface that stays beautiful for the life of the home.

Modern decorative effects are easily achieved with this new product. For example, a kitchen can be completely paneled with this stain-resistant paneling, and doors — to make maintenance even simpler — may be obtained with matching or contrasting Lifeclad finishes.

Also, cabinets and other built-ins can be constructed of the same economical, washable plywood so that the entire kitchen becomes a pleasure to keep sparkling rather than dreaded chore. A quick wipe with a dampen sponge or cloth whisks dust and grime away. The housewife has more time for less disparing house hold chores.

Lifeclad plywood paneling and matching flush doors are available in five grained finishes: Oriental Pecan, Arabian Sandalwood, Temple Walnut, Sable Walnut, and Vermont Cherry. Paneling also is available in three natural woods: Casual California Redwood cascade Hemlock and Mountain Larch.

The paneling is manufactured in standard 4'x 8' and 4'x 10'x¼" panels with or without random plank V-grooves ⅜" and other thicknesses are available for cabinet work and special construction.

The panels can either be installed by the home handyman with with either glue or nails. Matching flush doors for the five grained finishes are available in the Simpson Seven Eleven ceiling height line as well as standard sizes.

Ranch Features Four "Living Rooms"

Designed For Formal Or Informal Entertaining

HOSPITALITY, LARGE SIZE — This luxurious three-bedroom ranch was designed specifically for a family of six with a yen for comfortable living and a bent for stylish entertaining. The exterior is a homey combination of wood siding and brick, with windows as attractive as they are functional. Architect is Lester Cohen.

FOR DISCRIMINATING moderns with a bent for entertaining, this luxurious ranch offers the opportunity to do it in style.

There are no less than four rooms in this home suitable for formal or informal entertaining; and it's possible for the parents to have company at the same time the kids have the gang over, with never a moment of intrusion by either group on the other.

Architect Lester Cohen, designer of B-84 in the House of the Week series, said this was the specific problem he aimed to solve with this plan.

The house is not small—1,960 square feet. But if your budget can stand it, this house has some exquisite touches besides its comfortable living arrangement which make it well worth investigating.

The formal living room off the center hall is a grand 20 feet by 13 feet eight inches, with a bow window and a two-way fireplace shared with the equally spacious 20 feet by 12 feet eight inches family room. Both rooms flow together, but the large, brick fireplace preserves the essential privacy of each.

Adjoining both the family room and the formal dining room is a modern version of the old time sun room—a 20 feet by nine feet relaxing area with jaluosies on two sides.

The fourth entertaining area is the basement recreation room, 650 square feet of privacy which could, of course, be completed at some future date.

The three bedrooms are of a comfortable size for a family of six. Architect Cohen said the closet space, bath and lavatory also are geared to serve this size family, but with a degree of comfort and convenience most families of six aren't accustomed to.

Additional Details

Dimensions of the house are 27 feet deep by 77 feet wide, which could be put on a 100 feet lot in many areas. The double garage was put in the basement, an economical move which in this case doesn't encroach on the living area.

A sun room is an unusual feature in present day house design. With its excellent size and separate outdoor entrance, however, this one probably will be one of the most-used rooms in the home —excellent as a play room, summertime relaxing area or wintertime informal dining area.

For formal dining, the 13 feet eight inches by 11 feet dining room is given added graciousness by a bow window. A bow window overlooking the front garden also lends charm to the formal living room.

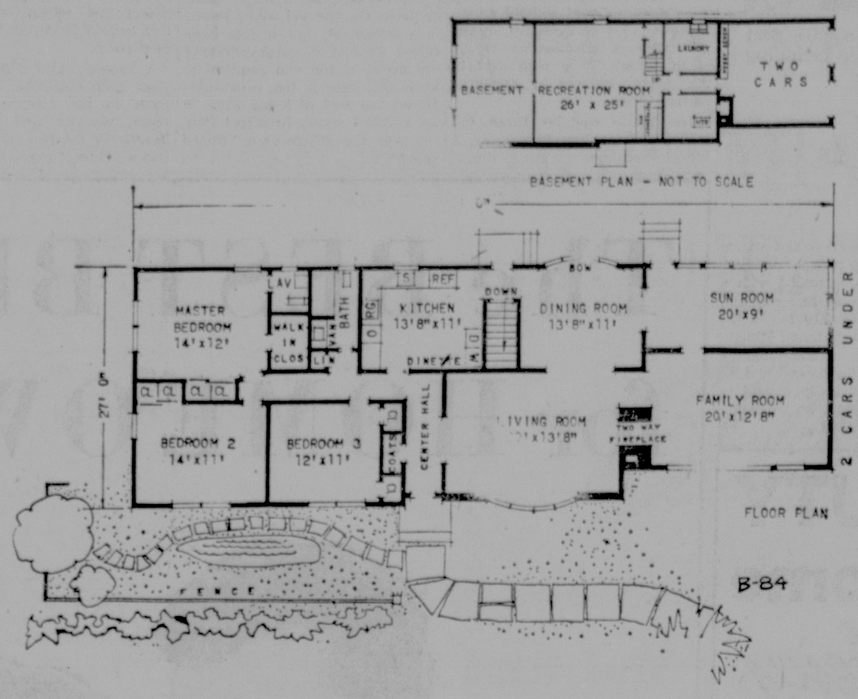

The kitchen of B-84, a comfortable 13 feet eight inches by 11 feet, has room enough for a breakfast dinette plus a washer-dryer (though the basement has ample laundry facilities). The kitchen work area is the efficient L-shaped design, with more than 30 feet of hanging and counter cabinets.

Notice how the plumbing is localized in one area of this house, an important feature economically. Incidentally, if a stall shower is desired in the lavatory off the master bedroom, enough space for it could be stolen from the large closet adjoining it. There is plenty of other closet space in the room.

In fact, closet space is abundant throughout the house —and, where needed, they are so arranged to provide sound insulation.

Architect Cohen designed the basement of B-84 as carefully as he planned the main floor. Laundry room and heater are completely separated from the 25 feet by 26 feet recreation room, but all three are convenient to the cellar stairs. A separate area is provided in the basement for the storage space a house this size normally requires.

The exterior of B-34 is pleasing contrast of brick and wood siding with windows as attractive as they are functional. Cohen suggests a wood fence with corner lamp post would add a homey touch.

FLOOR PLANS—Four separate rooms in this home are suitable for formal or informal entertaining. Basement recreation rooms, of course, could be completed at a future date. House contains 1,960 square feet of living area. Note that basement plan is not drawn to scale.

Sawing Lumber Requires Knowledge Of Good Sawyer

DID you ever wonder, when you look at beautiful, clear grained paneling in your home, how it was cut from a log? Did you ever wonder why some pieces of lumber have knots and others are clear

The cutting of a hugh Douglas fir log in a modern sawmill is one of the most exacting industrial jobs. No two logs are the same, so each takes a different manufacturing technique.

Let's take a Douglas fir log 42 inches in diameter and 300 years old, possibly 16 feet in length. The center of the log is coarse grained because the tree grows rapidly in its early years. The outer ten or twelve inches of the log contains free, portion and it is from this section that the most valuable pieces of lumber are cut.

The head sawyer takes a thin slab off the log to get a look inside. Then carefully he turns the giant log on the saw carriage with powerful mechanical arms, taking off more thick slabs until the log s squared. Then he will take off deep six-inch slab, then more. in These slabs will be run through an edger, a series of parallel saws,. and vertical grain strips will be cut. Depending on whether the board is cut across the grain or with it determines whether it will have vertical or flat grain.

All the clear boards which make paneling, flooring, siding, moulding, trim, casing and the like comes from the outer portion of the log. All of the sturdy structural pieces like framing and dimension lumber, timbers, stringers, scaffolding, and small timbers come from the heart of the log where the grain is more coarse.

Lumber with fine grain doesn't have the strength that pieces cut from the coarse grain portion of the logs have, where spring and summer wood are about evenly divided. The head sawyer must be an expert judge of what a log will make, for mistakes on the headrig can be costly. He must learn to judge instantly what cut will get the highest possible values from the log.

Louvers Should Be Removed

TO PREVENT the movable louvers of shutters or doors from sticking shut when they are painted, the louvers should be moved back and forth several times before the paint has dried completely. Leave a portion of the strip that moves the louvers unpainted so that you have a dry surface to hold when you take this precautionary measure. The unpainted spot can be coated later with a small brush.

OREGON still has a half century of old growth forest reserves which will sustain existing sawmills, plywood plants and pulp mills while the current crop of second growth timber is reaching maturity.

OREGON has the largest commercial forest acreage found in any state. If its forest land was in a strip 16 miles wide, it would reach from Portland, Oregon, to Portland, Maine.

Charming Story And A Half Has Grace Of Simplicity

CHARMINGLY SIMPLE—A covered front gallery, or loggia, adds a homey touch to this attractive 1½ story home whose hallmark is simplicity. With the second story finished, the house contains four bedrooms and 2½ baths. The architect is Fenick A. Vogel, a designer who scorns frills and gimmicks.

Orderliness Is Keynote For Leisurely Living

ORDER IS A lovely thing, a poet once said, and in today's rush to find something new, something different in home design, it is refreshing to discover a house whose genuine elegance is the result of plain simplicity.

"There is nothing tricky about this house," said architect Fenick A. Vogel, who designed it. "Just a straight-forward plan that should appeal to home buyers who are thinking about tomorrow as well as today."

House of the Week B-80 does, simply and economically, solve the age-old design poblem of providing for the usually obscure needs of the future.

This is one of its additional advantages, however. Its main appeal lies in its honest and logical answer to the needs of the present —up to the minute design both in side and out, uncluttered by gimmicks or frills that often add much to the cost with little corresponding increase in livability.

With its upstairs unfinished. B-80 is a two-bedroom, one and one-half bath home with 1,380 square feet of living area in dimensions of 48 feet by 34 feet not counting the double garage which adds 24 feet 4 inches to the width.

Finishing the upstairs, which could be done a portion at a time as the extra space is needed, would add 1,034 square feet to the total. It contains a second full bathroom, plus two extra-large bedrooms—one 20 feet by 17 feet, the other 19 feet by 17 feet.

The formal living room, a comfortable 21 feet by 13 feet four inches, is highlighted not only by a large fireplace but also by a bay window which provides indoor enjoyment of the delightful front porch, or loggia, which plainly is one of the most attractive exterior features of the house.

The exterior walls are shingle, with accents of stone and board and batten. The dormer and cupola pleasantly complement the loggia.

A word should be said about the excellent storage facilities in B-80. Aside from the spacious bedroom closets (one a walk-in), note the handy location of the broom closet and both linen closets, plus the coat closet in the front vestibule and the storage closet adjoining the laundry. The 24 feet four inches by 22 feet eight inches garage contains extra space in both directions, and the full basement, of course, provides almost unlimited storage space.

Vogel also suggests adding another lavatory in the basement if the owner should decide to convert a portion of it into a recreation room.

The second floor addition (which could, of course, be completed from the start) is the bargain kind, its ceiling and walls a part of the basic house structure.

Additional Details

Center hall planning in two directions results in a traffic pattern in this house which, again, is simple and direct.

The service hall at the rear leads into the bedroom hall, opening up all areas of the house from that direction; and the main entrance vestibule accomplishes the same result from the front of the house without wasting additional hall space.

Entering the house from the outside likewise has been well planned for convenience—in all kinds of weather.

Doors at both corners of the garage enable you to drive in and enter the house through the front door (under the covered loggia porch) or the rear, either through the service entrance or the sliding glass patio doors in the dining room.

By widening the rear hall to accommodate lavatory and laundry, architect Vogel has centered all the housekeeping facilities neatly at the service end of the house. The laundry, incidentally, is located behind folding doors.

The kitchen features the L-shaped plan for its work area, long recognized as a step-saving design, and is large enough to accommodate a dinette which doesn't interfere with traffic through the room.

Each of the four bedrooms has two exposures, and all are convenient to full sized bathrooms upstairs and down. The first floor bedrooms also are located well away from the possibly noisy entertaining areas.

Transform Appearance

YOU CAN transform the appearance of a room by changing one important feature — the ceiling. Painting the ceiling in a fresh color works wonders in its effect on the rest of the decor, particularly when the color change is dramatic. Why not perk up your living room or dining room for spring with this simple color trick. Using a special edging roller or metal guards makes it effortless to paint the ceiling without worry of over-lapping the walls.

L-SHAPED EFFICIENCY—Artist's conception of kitchen, viewed from dinette area. All the housekeeping facilities, including first-floor laundry, are centered at the service end of the house.

Electric Heating Now Possible In House

OWNERS of new homes aren't the only ones who can enjoy the modern convenience of whole-house electric heating. Today, families who live in houses of virtually any age or achitectural style can convert to electric heat.

One reason for this is that it's now possible to install in older houses insulation authorities agree is needed for the efficient and economical use of electric heat.

Thanks to new materials, techniques and equipment, a protective barrier of mineral wool insulation can be installed easily in spaces between floor and ceiling joists and wall studs of existing

Air pressure is used to force heat-saving "blowing wool" through a special hose into these key areas. Installed this way, mineral wool insulation helps keep heating costs down, family comfort high.

Another reason converting to electric heat fits into the remodeling plans of so many home owners is that it's less expensive to buy and install than other heating systems. With electric heat, there are no dripping pipes, unsightly radiators or bulky fuel tanks to pay for and maintain. With the elimination of these space-stealing items, there's the bonus of more room for storage and other uses.

In addition, a variety of electrical heating systems is available to to meet all kinds of remodeling problems that might be found in older homes. Baseboard units, wall panels, ceiling coils and electric furnaces are the most popular types of electric heating systems today.

The benefits of electric heat include a cleaner house free of smoke, soot and ashes, and the convenience of individual control of room temperatures through spearate thermostats.

You'll Find It Easier

YOU'LL find it easier to paint wall-hung cabinets if you remove the doors and paint them separately. Place the doors on a pair of saw horses or two boxes of equal weight or on a table. The job will be speedier if you remove the hardware before applying the enamel. Paint the interior of the cabinets first, then the trim.

Cork Tile

CORK tile is the quietest and most comfortable underfoot of all smooth surface flooring materials.

Utility Companies See 5.2 Million Homes Heated

MORE than 1,116,000 homes will be heated completely by electricity by the end of 1962. Utility companies expect that by the end of this decade 5.2 million houses will be heated with electricity.

These are figures released recently after a nationwide survey by Electrical World magazine, a business publication.

In addition, surveys show, some 400 houses daily—new and old—now are being equipped with complete electric heating equipment.

What's the reason for this startling change from conventional fuels to electricity as a means of maintaining cold-weather comfort?

Perhaps the most significant is the cleanliness electric heating provides. Since electricity heats without combustion, smoke and fumes are eliminated. This means less housekeeping, plus the economy of a cleaner house: fewer laundry bills and cleaning bills for clothing, furniture, draperies, and other household goods.

Some additional reasons for the increase in popularity of electric heating include:

1. Individual control of room temperatures. Most electric heating systems have individual room thermostats. This means bedrooms, kitchens, and rooms that aren't used can be kept cooler. Living rooms, bathrooms, playrooms, and sickrooms can be kept at the temperature preferred by family members who use them.

2. Single source of energy. Heating electrically means that the needs of the household are satisfied with one source of energy — electricity — for heating, cooking, lighting and appliances, as well as water heating.

3. Low-cost installation. Many electric heating systems are ideal for existing houses because they can be installed without expensive remodeling. For new homes, these same systems — baseboard units, ceiling coils, and wall panels — can be installed quickly and with a minimum of labor.

4. Scientific development of insulation to make electric heating as economical as fossil fuels. The National Mineral Wool Insulation Association has provided Quality Home Requirements that specify mineral wool installations to insure the greatest economy and comfort of electric heating.

Successful

In 1961, pure vinyl accent areas were successfully combined with embossed linoleum marking one of the most significant styling achievements in linoleum since Frederick Walton, an Englishman, invented the material in 1863.

New Design Takes Care Of Corner Lot Problem

ABOUT A year ago architect Lester Cohen designed a house specifically for a narrow lot, solving the problem of many House of the Week readers who were literally being squeezed out of most of today's home designs.

"Since then," said Cohen, "I've been getting requests from persons who own corner lots, especially narrow corner lots. Their problem is more complicated—but not insoluble.

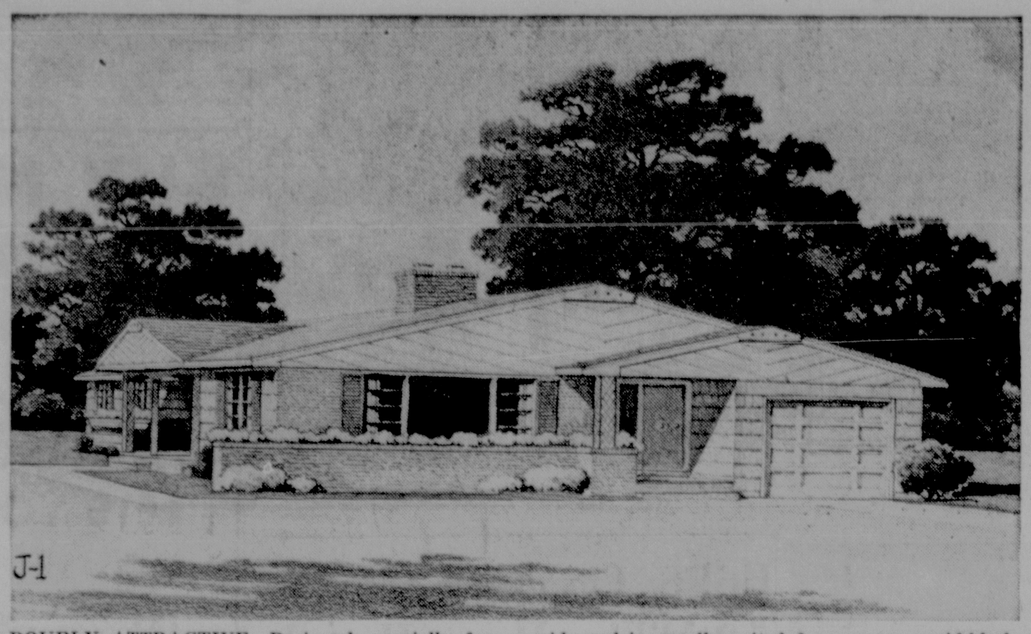

Cohen's newest design, House of the Week J-1, solves it effectively, attractively and economically. It is a three (or four) bedroom ranch with some optional features so the owner can accommodate it to his own needs.

The house is only 37 feet wide including the garage, which means it could fit on a 50-foot lot in many areas. Its depth is 63 feet, and it contains a modest 1,522 square feet of living space not counting the basement or garage.

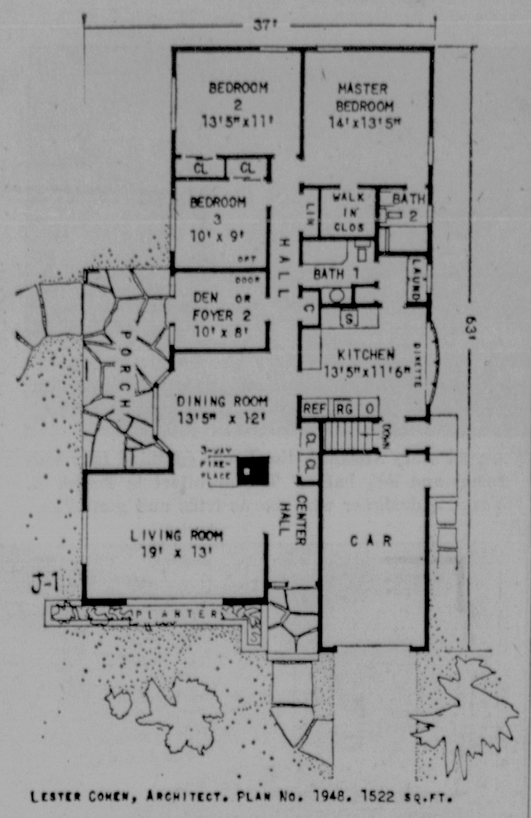

On a corner lot, both exposed sides present an equally pleasing appearance, so that actually the front door could be placed on either side. On the other hand, if the house were placed on a mid-block narrow lot it retains an area for outdoor living—a feature often sacrificed in "elongated" houses.

All this merely accommodates the house to the problem lot: there's plenty to recommend this house, moreover, no matter what lot it's built on.

Its floor plan is exceptionally well ordered for a medium-sized house, with the sleeping area placed well away from the housekeeping and entertaining areas, convenient bathroom facilities, direct entry from the garage to the kitchen, efficient use of floor space, plus a number of luxury touches seldom found in homes this size.

DOUBLY ATTRACTIVE—Designed especially for a corner lot, this house presents a pleasing view from both exposed sides. The house is only 37 feet wide and is equally suited for a narrow mid-block lot. It contains three bedrooms, two bathroom and a den which could serve as a guest room.

LESTER COHEN, ARCHITECT. PLAN NO. 1948. 1522 SQ.FT.

'Mud' Room Necessary In Summer, Too

MOST everyone knows what a 'mud room' is. If not, the name gives a strong clue.

A mud room is any enclosed area leading into a home where family members can wash their hands, take off wet or dirty boots and shoes, and maybe even take a full shower if gardening, energetic snow shoveling or exuberant playtime make it desirable.

It's easy to see that a mud room is just as necessary in winter as summer. Wet boots and shoes are hard on clean floors and rugs, especially when clinging cinders and dirt come along with them.

Most every home has space for a mud room. It can be just a sink in the corner of the garage, for instance. The utility room, too, is ready-made for such a purpose.

The mud room is fast becoming a special part of many newly built homes. In this case, says the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, it is often a small bathroom, with lavatory, water closet and shower, built adjacent to the kitchen or garage.

The man of the family has been known to insist, though, that it be near his workshop or do-it-yourself area.

Wherever it is located, access should be as close to an outside door as possible. Any qualified plumbing contractor can offer advice on how to arrange the best possible mud room for any home.

Additional Details

If the main entry were placed on the narrow side of this house, next to the garage, the room adjoining the dining room could be used as a den or, in a pinch, a fourth bedroom. An optional door between it and bedroom No. 3 also would convert it into a two-room apartment for in-laws. As a den, library, music room or other relaxing spot, however, it is ideal. A door leads to the flagstone porch, and windows on both sides provide plenty of sunlight.

If the main entry were placed on the long side, this den would become the main foyer—and a spacious one, at 10 feet by eight feet.

An eye-catching three-way fireplace divides the living and dining rooms, complementing the broad window overlooking the planter on the front wall of the living room. The dining room also has a dramatic bay window, looking out over the porch and side yard.

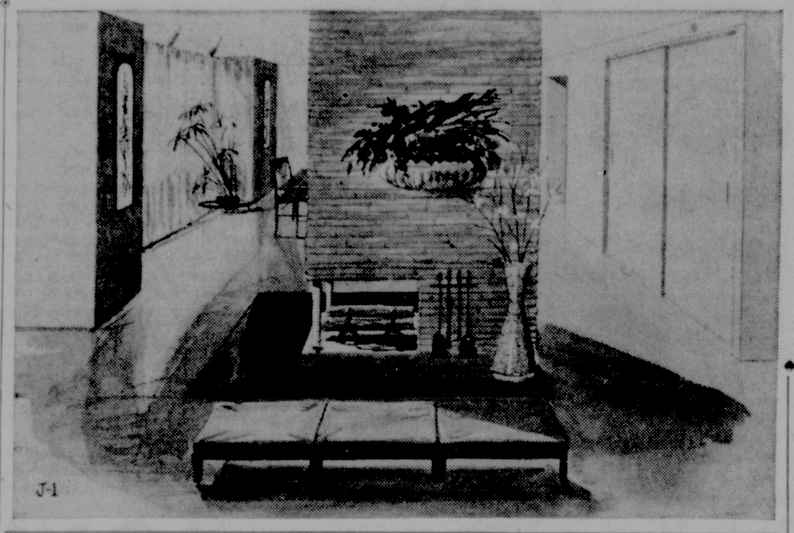

A pleasant bow window also enhances the kitchen and provides an obvious spot for the breakfast table, out of the way of the work area. There is abundant counter space in the kitchen, and no less than 32 linear feet of hanging and counter cabinets.

Laundry facilities are located unobstrusively near the kitchen and adjacent to the bedroom wing and the main bathroom; and the supply cabinet is extra large.

A second entrance to the main bathroom makes it do the work of two, serving both the kitchen and the bedrooms. The master bedroom, of course, has its own bath with stall shower.

Note that every bit of the plumbing in this house—kitchen, laundry and both bathrooms—is grouped in this location, a real money-saving feature.

Large and well-placed closets are another feature of this house. There are two closets near the center hall, another opposite the [illegible], a linen closet convenient to all the bedrooms and a large walk-in closet in the master bedroom.

DRAMATIC DIVIDER—A three-way fireplace divides the living room and dining room in this attractive three-bedroom ranch. View is from the front wall of the living room where a large window overlooks the front brick planter.

WOOD paneling can take many faces. Homeowners like it for walls in most rooms because wood can be finished with clear varnish or lacquer to show its grain and color, or it can be stained, painted or even wash-coated to get a multitude of effects.

Greenhouse Adds Freshness To Economical Ranch

Provides Flowers The Year Around

ENJOYING June in January—plus several other equally remarkable accomplishments—is possible in this attractive, medium-size house for a three-bedroom family.

"Here in the midwest we go in for relaxed living," said its designer, architect Elmer Gylleck of Elgin, Ill. "This house is ideal for the homeowner who likes to enjoy himself informally without sacrificing elegance or style."

Especially interesting on these bleak winter days is a small greenhouse in the family room. Other noteworthy features include an indoor charcoal grill, a handy snack bar, a place especially designed for a home movie screen, and an impressive stone fireplace.

The house, B-99 in the House of the Week series, contains 1,668 square feet of living area not counting the 462 square foot attached garage. Its overall dimensions are 33 feet deep by 74 feet wide.

A neat design feature is the incorporation of the garage into the house area itself, rather than the more customary ranch-house technique of appending it onto the side. The informal area is located behind the garage, which makes it well isolated from the formal living room but still convenient to the kitchen-dining area.

Equally intriguing is the fireplace-grill-oven-snack bar complex which separates three rooms, the kitchen, living room and dining room. It's an example of efficiency at its best, providing maximum use of every square foot. Gylleck continued this kind of economical planning in the sleeping wing, where a minimum of hall space serves the three bedrooms and main bathroom.

The house has two full baths, the second well-placed in the informal area and close to the rear entry. It also permits the family room to be converted into a guest room, with its own private bath.

Additional Details

The house has a full basement, which Gylleck has left completely without partitions so the owner can divide it as he sees fit. Should the owner prefer no basement at all, the basement stair area could be used for utilities or a small heating plant.

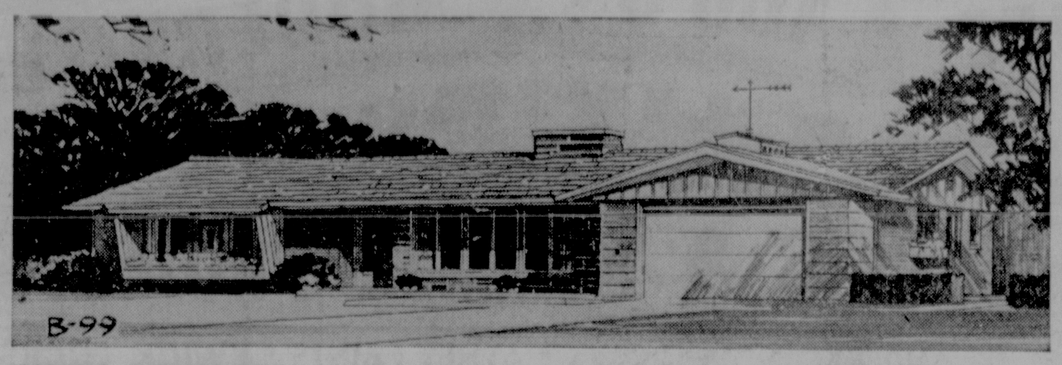

Another option Gylleck provides is for a kitchen entrance to the main bath. The toilet is located close to the tub partition partly for this purpose. Mainly, though, the architect wanted to provide space in the bathroom for other furniture—a chair, for example. Incidentally, note the extra large vanity and double lavatories.

A bonus amount of counter space is an important characteristic of the well designed kitchen, but its most interesting feature probably is the snack bar. It not only is handy for breakfasts and quick snacks, but is well placed as a serving counter for guests.

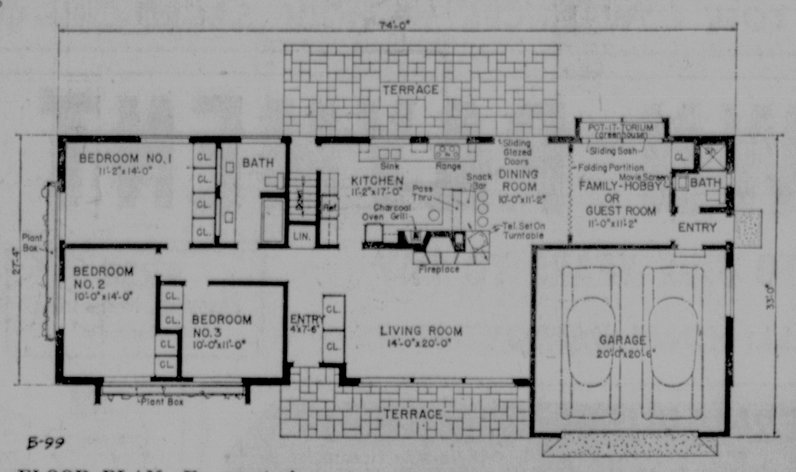

Although the dining room is a modest 10 feet by 11 feet 2 inches it is large enough for family use, and can be enlarged if necessary by opening the folding partition to the family room. The whole area stretches more than 20 feet—a perfect place, Gylleck felt, for showing home movies. So he suggests a built-in movie screen on the bathroom wall directly in the center of the family room.

Equally convenient is Gylleck's suggested TV arrangement. A turntable on the stone fireplace shelf would permit TV viewing from the living room, dining room, family room and even the kitchen.

The eye-catching rustic stone fireplace in the living room is complemented by deft use of ashlar stone on the exterior of the house at the front terrace. The rest of the exterior is brick veneer with some wood siding. The architect suggests a red, rustic type brick, light cream wood trim, siding and gable ends of natural redwood, a bright coral front entrance, and a dark roof, either green or brown.

CORDIAL INFORMALITY — A three-bedroom ranch with well integrated informal area featuring, among other things, a greenhouse. The house contains 1,668 square feet of living area, plus a full basement and 462 square foot garage, in over-dimensions of 33' by 74'.

FLOOR PLAN—Four exterior entrances guarantee excellent traffic movement in and out of this house. Note the abundance of closet space — in the entry, family room and hallway as well as the bedrooms. House has a full basement which can be partitioned as the owner desires.

COZY AND FUNCTIONAL—The rustic stone wall containing this fireplace and TV shelf also contains, on the other side, a wall oven, charcoal grill and work area. Artists' conception shows view from living room through modest dining room into family room with its greenhouse windows.

Ideal Time For Fix Up

SPRING is the ideal time to attend to those unsightly cracked or stained ceilings. Rather than go through all the mess of an old-fashioned patch-up job, though, try covering the old surface with an attractive new acoutical tile ceiling that won't crack, chip or peel. Acoustical tile can be cemented in place with a special tile adhesive called Brush-On Ceiling Cement, or stapled to wood furring strips, depending on the condition of the existing ceiling.

Specialists Offer Advice

CHILDREN are nice, but noisy to have around the house. Here's a tip from interior design specialists of the Armstrong Cork Company on how to quiet things down without resorting to muzzles and earplugs. Sound-condition the children's playroom with a modern acoustical tile ceiling. This will help "muffle" the noise of exhuberant play and prevent it from spreading all over the house.

Lighter Basements

CHOOSE light colors when you paint your basement walls because in this way you will obtain a maximum amount of light reflection.

OREGON and Washington forests are managed as tree farms so that perpetual crops of timber can be assured for lumber, plywood and paper for every generation in the future. Good soil and much rain make ideal tree farm land.

Newest Design

ONE OF the newest designs in vinyl sheet flooring, called Montina, has a wearing surface made up of random sized, multi-colored vinyl pebbles that are similar in size and appearance to natural river-bed gravel.

ONE reason why home builders are going back to wood windows is because wood windows won't warp, they report.

Insulated Siding Can Help Overall Look Of A House

THOUGH mineral-surface insulating siding has been used as a building materials product for over 30 years, people are talking about it with new enthusiasm.

Inherent insulation properties are the same, but the quality of design, color and texture has been completely overhauled and upgraded. New, wider selections colors, along with added texture, are permanently embossed right at the factory; no painting is required; ease of maintenance is a boon to the busy homeowner.

Buyers today are not only color and quality conscious, they demand product versatility. The two-toned effect that natural stone or brick combined with siding gives any home — whether new construction or modernized — is a forward trend.

Insulating siding is architecturally compatible with all exterior sidewall materials. Striated panels in clapboard design, surfaced with colorful mineral granules, offer the rich textured look with deep shadowlines that people want. Behind this front, one-half inch insulation board backing adds strength and protection to any structure.

WEST Coast hemlock is widely sought and prized as the best softwood flooring because of its high resistance to mechanical abrasion.

Homeowners Still Buy Unfinished Panelling

WHILE factory finished wood panelling is becoming increasingly popular, most householders still buy the unifinished variety and complete the job themselves. Here are some suggestions on how ot do it.

You'll find it easier if you finish the panels before they are attached to the wall. To save your back, place the panels on saw horses or a suitable table or work bench. Regardless of the type of finish being used, the wood should be rubbed with fine steel wool to remove any dirt, dust or surface roughness. Any oil or grease must be wiped away with odorless paint thinner or denatured alcohol.

Where the color of the wood is uniform and the shade you want, finishing consists merely of applying two coats of clear, quality varnish, sanding lightly after the first coat has dried hard. If a dull finish is wanted, use a gloss or semi-gloss varnish for the first coat and a low gloss or stain varnish for the final coat. Follow label instructions as to whether the first coat should be thinned and whether a seal coat should be applied first.

Varnish, incidentally, should not be shaken or stirred; this produces bubbles in the dried film. It should be flowed on with a well-loaded brush with a minimum of stroking, first with the grain and then across it. Finish with a nearly dry brush, again parallel to the grain.

It's a good idea to coat all edges at the same time. In this way unfinished edges will not be exposed if the wood should happen to shrink.

For an even lower luster finish than flat varnish provides, brush on a penetrating sealer which, as its name suggests, sinks into the wood, becomes part of it and makes it mar resistant. The surface can be waxed if some sheen is desired.

Usually, the color of the wood will not be exactly what you want. To achieve the desired shade, stain it with either oil or water stains which come in a great variety of wood tones. Where a colored grain effect is desired, you can choose from the entire spectrum, either by using colored stains or by adding colors in oil to penetrating resin sealers. Don't forget the edges.

Since the methods of applying different stains vary as does the length of time they are permitted to dry before being rubbed off, read label instructions carefully. This applies also to the question of whether the wood should be sealed before staining and whether the stain should be sealed before applying the varnish finishing coats.

Blond effects are also very popular for panels. These are obtained by first brushing on a coat of white pigmented sealer or enamel removed. This may make it impossible to varnish or paint the panels at a later date because paint does not adhere to wax. Play safe by first sealing the wood with a penetrating sealer before applying the wax.

Different kinds of wood require different preliminary treatment. Open grain woods such as oak, mahogany and walnut should be filled with pastewood filler in the proper color before being varnished. Fir plywood should be treated with a penetrating resin sealer to tame the grain.

Let stand for ten or fifteen minutes and then wipe with a dry cloth. The white will accent the grain pattern. When dry, apply one, or better two, coats of varnish.

Panels can also be finished with wax, either clear or in a variety of wood tones. Wax penetrates the wood and colors it and can't be undercoat, generally thinned 50 per cent with odorless paint thinner.

Large Bi-Level Home Offers Fresh Variations

FRESH VARIATION—This bi-level home by architect Rudolph A. Matern offers a dramatic exterior as well as a fresh and exciting approach to interior design. Especially interesting is the upper level porch, or sun deck, which extends around the front of the house in the form of a raised planter.

The bi-level home, by now firmly established, still is new enough to offer the freshest variations of all contemporary designs.

Like the early split level designs when first seen several years back, some of today's bi-levels are good; some not so good. This one, B-86 in the House of the Week series, appears excellent.

It was designed by architect Rudolph A. Matern and passes superbly the all important tests of looks, livability an deconomy. But B-86 provides as well several dramatic features bi-level style makes possible.

By far the most dramatic of these is a balcony in the upper level rear foyer and kitchen, 15 feet around, overlooking the lower level family room. Thus a 90 square foot area of the family room has a two-story ceiling, accented with hanging lights. The whole arrangement serves to integrate the two levels of the home, an unusual as well as favorable feature.

This house is difinitely in the large-size category. It has five bedrooms (or four bedrooms and a den), three bathrooms, a double garage, a 24 foot by 13 foot living room with a large fireplace, separate dining room, and — one of the most practical touches of all — a separate lower level kitchenette off the family room.

Its dimensions are 66 feet wide by 29 feet 8 inches deep with 1,558 square feet of living area on the upper level and 924 square feet on the lower level not counting the garage and basement area. An 8 foot wide deck on the upper level, entered through sliding glass doors from both the living and dining rooms, runs the full depth of the house.

A mid-level foyer controls the traffic in and out of the house, guaranteeing no intrusion on the privacy of either level. A second staircase, from the family room up to the kitchen balcony, completes the traffic circulation pattern. At no time is it necessary to pass through a room, which may be occupied, to get to another room in the house.

Additional Details

The family room in this house is a spacious 283 square feet, which seems even larger because of the two-story ceiling and the huge, panoramic rear window. There are three entrances to the family room — from the rear and through the garage as well as down from the mid-level entrance foyer.

The lower-level kitchen makes the family room truly a livable area as well as an excellent place for teen-agers to entertain. And the surrounding balcony makes possible supervision (of small fry as well) from an unobstrusive vantage point.

As dramatic as the balcony is the upper level porch, or sun deck, which has the effect of adding about 235 additional square feet to the living room-dining room expanse. The large planter extending from the deck across the front of the house, on the upper level, provides an unusual exterior feature.

Use of the lower level for living — the primary economical value of bi-level design — does not, in B-86, eliminate all the normal basement space. There is plenty of room for storage, both indoors and out, as well as an oversized heater room.

As a matter of fact, storage space is one thing this house has more than enough of. Note the oversized closets in each of the five bedrooms, and especially the large storage wall in the family room. Note also how the closets are arranged to serve as sound buffers, especially for the master bedroom.

The bathrooms in this house deserve further mention. Both main baths, on the upper and lower levels, have double lavatories; and the upper level bath has extra large vanitis. All this plumbing, incidentally, is stacked in on are a for economy.

Tough Panels

WOOD paneling such as Douglas fir or west coast hemlock is tough yet beautiful and thus makes ideal wall paneling in play rooms or children's rooms.

Big Switch

ONE OF the nation's largest home builders has switched from metal to wood windows in his new homes because wood frames are better fitting, better insulated and better looking.

Modest-Sized Ranch Has Luxury

MODESTLY ELEGANT—Accents of brick and vertical siding complement the long, low look of this three-bedroom ranch which is emphasized by the sleek roof line and long planter boxes. The house, designed by architect Rudolph A. Matern, contains three bedrooms and 2½ baths in 1,427 square feet of living area.

TOUCHES of luxury in this sleek three-bedroom ranch make it hard to realize the house is in the modest, less-than-1,500 square foot category.

Its handsome roof design and the way the garage is attached give it the long, low look sought by so many home buyers; and its interior design is extremely well adapted to modern living.

Designer of House of the Week B-82 is architect Rudolph A. Matern.

Its most striking interior feature is a spacious living room-dining room expanse—367 square feet in all—high—lighted by a handsome three-way fireplace. Both rooms connect through sliding glass doors to a rear terrace where the fireplace chimney does double duty as an outdoor brabecue. (Actually, triple duty: the common chimney also serves as a heater flue.)

The family room-kitchen area is another open-plan arrangement, 19 feet by 10 feet combined, but nicely divided into two nearly equal sized rooms by one arm of the U-shaped kitchen work area. The arm can serve as a breakfast bar when not in use as a counter.

One of the nicest touches of elegance in the home is the second outdoor terrace off the master bedroom.

What could be finer than a cool drink on a warm night a step from the bedroom before turning in? Or imagine stepping out on the terrace with a cup of coffee and the morning newspaper before the dew is dry. That's living.

"I've completely separated the sleeping area from the activity area to insure privacy and quiet," said architect Matern. "That way, both sections of the house can be enjoyed to their fullest."

B-82 contains only 1,427 square feet, excluding the garage and porches, and the full dimensions are 30 feet deep by 69 feet 2 inches side. The garage, single-car size but with extra storage space, accounts for 11 feet 4 inches of the width.

Additional Details

The unusual placement of the family room-kitchen area in the front of the house is one of the most up to the minute features of B-82.

"You'll notice the kitchen work area, where a housewife spends much of her day, is practically the same short distance from both the front door and the service entrance," said Matern. "It's also just a half dozen steps or so from the rear terrace."

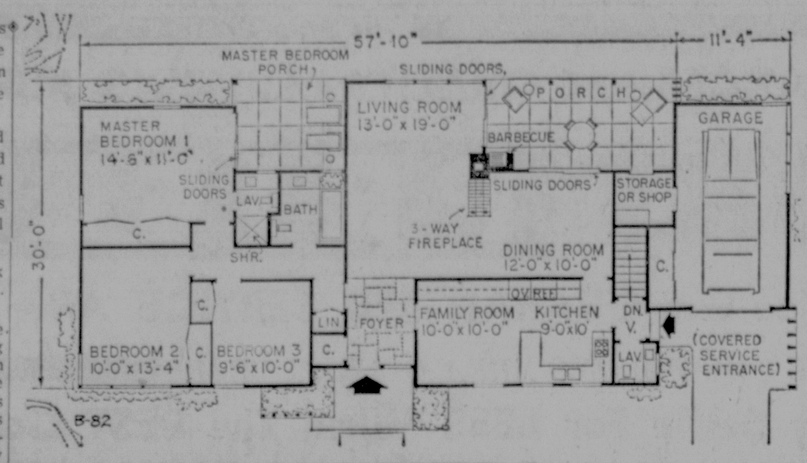

That's only one of the step-saving features, however. There are no less than five outside entrances to this ranch which, with its central foyer design, provides excellent traffic circulation throughout.

The foyer, incidentally, is slate-in—concrete construction—easy to keep clean besides adding a note of modern charm.

The bathroom and lavatories in this house also deserve special attention. Note the interesting design of the large hall bath; a planter at the juncture of the tub and lavatory counter top. The bath adjourning the master bedroom (and convenient to the terrace) has a shower stall. And the other lavatory is equally well placed, convenient to the kitchen and informal living areas and directly at the top of the basement stairs.

Storage is no problem in this house. All the bedrooms have oversized closets; there is a coat closet in the foyer; a good sized linen closet; a 20 square foot storage closet in the garage, plus a second storage area entered through both the garage and the rear terrace—an excellent spot for lawn furniture, garden tools or a shop. The basement, of course, also provides ample storage.

The exterior of B-82 is a pleasing combination of wood siding with accents of brick, and long planter boxes to emphasize the sleek, low look. Vertical siding plus vertical trellis-type arrangements at the main entrance and the covered service entrance complement the generally horizontal appearance.

MODERN AND HOMEY—A three-way fireplace highlights the 367-square-foot living room-dining room expanse in this handsome ranch. Artist's conception shows view from living room. Common chimney of fireplace also serves outdoor barbecue as well as heater flue.

Pink Bathroom Most Popular

1961 was another pink year for manufacturers of bathroom fixtures.

Pink, more than all the other pastel colors available, says the Plumbing Heating Cooling information Bureau, continued to be the favored choice of homemakers across the country.

How To Clean Shower Curtains

PLASTIC or miracle-fabric shower curtains should be washed by spreading flat on a table and sponging with sudsy water. Rinse the curtain with clear water, then wipe with clean cloths. Turn the curtain over and repeat on the other side.

Then replace on the shower rod and spread it out straight to dry, advises the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau.

Shower curtains made of fabric such as heavy drill or canvas can be put into the washing machine or laundry tub for washing.

While you're at the job, give the shower rod a good cleaning.

Bathroom Plans Book Available

"MODERN Bathroom Plans" is the title of a useful booklet offered for ten cents by the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, 35 East Wacker Drive, Chicago 1, Illinois.

It suggests several good plans for family bathrooms, shows economical combinations of rooms or fixtures, and indicates how it is possible to obtain bathroom efficiency in minimum areas.

APPROXIMATELY one American family in three owns a dog, according to a recent survey. The current dog population is estimated at 24,130,000.

KEEP your house paints from getting "wet feet" by placing each flower pot on an inch or so of pebbles in a deep saucer or tray and pouring water into the saucer to the top of the pebble layer. Evaporation and capillary action of porous clay pots will give plants the moisture they need without soaking roots.

Paint Meant To Decorate

PAINT is meant to decorate and protect sound surfaces; it is not intended to fill cracks and holes. Before painting walls be sure to fill such blemishes with patching plaster, spackling compound or crack filler. After the patch has dried, it should be sanded smooth. Read the label instructions on the paint you are using to learn whether such patches should be primed.

Modified Ranch Has Seven Rooms

Inspired By Need Of A Low Budget

NEW DESIGN IDEA—The needs of a family with a limited budget dictated the unusual design of this house, a "modified ranch" with seven rooms (three bedrooms) in 1,297 square feet. A second level beneath the bedroom area, however, provides 630 square feet of additional room suitable for a variety of purposes.

A NEW design idea, inspired by the needs of a family with a limited budget, enabled architect Samuel Paul to provide in this attractive House of the Week seven full rooms in less than 1,300 square feet—plus plenty of bonus room for a young family to grow in.

"Its appearance is deceiving," said architect Paul. "It's not a split level, but really a three-bedroom modified ranch."

Actually, what Paul has done is combined the best features of both in House of the Week B-83.

"It's a ranch because it affords the convenience of having the main entrance, the garage, kitchen, family room, dining room, living room and outdoor patios all on one level," said Paul. "The only stair-climbing involved is four short steps up to the bedroom wing.

"But those few steps offer the advantage and the economy of gaining extra livable space below." Paul also observed that placing the bedrooms several feet from the ground gives them a degree of privacy ranch houses usually don't offer.

The bonus space below the bedroom wing—amounting to 630 square feet, or nearly half the 1,297 square feet in the basic house—is, of course, ideally suited for future development as a fourth and fifth bedroom area (with bath) as family needs dictate.

Situated between the basement and living levels, however, it offers a variety of other possibilities.

A three room apartment for parents or guests; a rent producing apartment (it has its own outside entrance); a playroom plus a private office; a fourth bedroom and recreation room—these are only a few of its potential uses.

The remainder of the house is typical of the well-ordered designs by Paul.

The living room, dining room, family room and entrance foyer completely encircle the kitchen, making it the hub of the house in the strictest sense of the word. As a step-saver, B-83 is a housewife's dream come true.

Dimensions of the house are 66' feet wide by 33 feet four inches deep, including th garage which adds 11 feet 8 inches to the width. Paul suggests an 80 feet by 100 feet lot. The 1,297 square feet in the basic house does not include the 287 square foot garage, or either the 667 square foot basement or 630 square foot multi-purpose level.

Additional Details

A Cathedral type ceiling in the dining and family room, 9 feet 6 inchs at its peak, helps to separate the dining area from the kitchen besides making the rooms appear larger.

This is only one of a number of features that provide a degree of elegance not usually found in homes of this size.

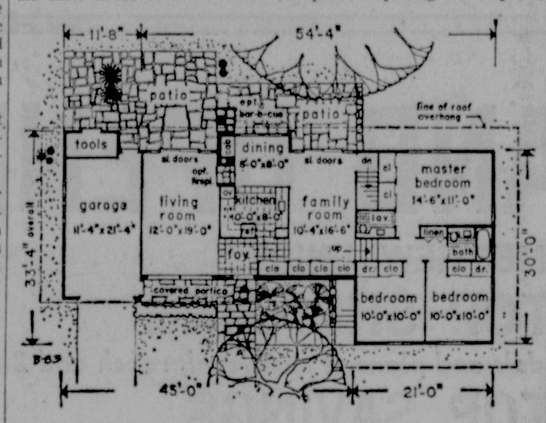

The kitchen, for example, has a glamorous stone veneer wall over integrated with the adjacent stone fireplace. Adjoining the fireplace, in the dining room, is space for a china cabinet. The fireplace itself may, at the owner's option, be constructed as a through-the-wall type, becoming a part of both the living and dining room.

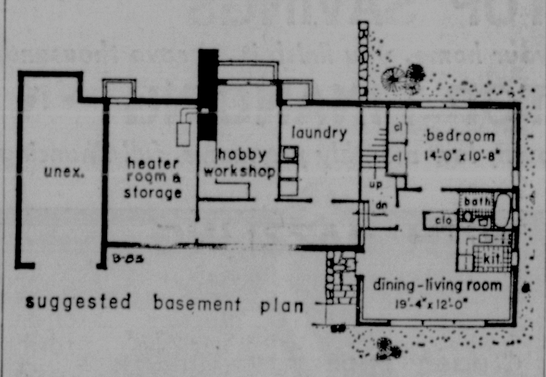

The living room extends clear across the house with windows both front and rear, and sliding glass doors leading to the exquisite rear patio which is an integral part of the entire living area of the house. Sliding glass doors also open from the dining room to the patio.

The exterior of B-83 is of vertical siding accented with stone at the covered portico — which should be mentioned as another outdoor living area. The separate entrance to the multi-purpose level also is off the portico, an especially handy feature if the level were developed as a rental apartment, professional office or recreation room.

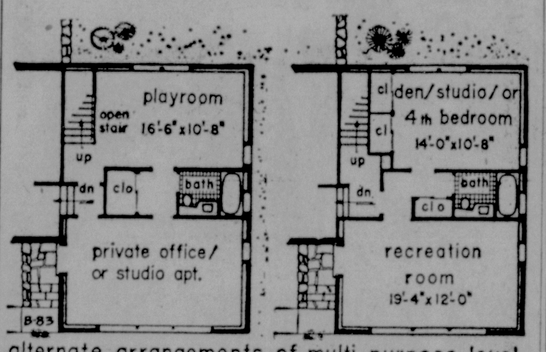

This house has more than adequate closet space. There is a large entry closet, tool and garden storage room behind the garage, three sliding door closets in the family room. Bedroom closets are roomy, especially in the master bedroom which has eight feet of closets.

The most remarkable feature of this house, however, is that such a small area contains so much.

Kitchen Most Popular Spot In Any House

WHAT'S the most popular room in the home? Builders of America' custom homes say it is the kitchen by long odds.

Smart builders across the country put little extra features in the kitchen which are sure to attract the attention of the woman buyer.

One feature which delights the homemaker's heart, says a Portland builder, is an all-wood kitchen. "You should hear them exclaim," he says, "when they walk into one of these charmers.

"There is warmth and friendliness in wood," he points out, "and we make the most of it. We try to select light colored woods such as west coast hemlock or Douglas fir, and then we finish the wood with clear plastics to get the full impact of their natural golden coloring an their incomparable texture and grain.

"These two woods," the builder pointed out, "we call the glamour woods because they have so much elegance and charm, and yet they are relatively inexpensive.

"Next to wood cabinets and wall paneling," the builder said, "we try for something unusual in storage ideas. This always appeals to women, something a little different in storage which puts most used items closest to her when she needs them. Another good idea is to have plenty of electric outlets and plenty of light in the kitchen.

"I have seen," the builder sta ted, "women almost bypass the rest of the house because they have become so intrigued with a good wood kitchen."

Install Fireplace With A Minimum Muss; Low Cost

THE fireplace has, since the colonial period, been a tradition in the American home. The comfort and enjoyment of an open fire, without the high cost of masonry, is now possible through the development of prefabricated fireplaces.

These unique fireplaces, designed to satisfy every budget and style preference, make this American tradition a reality for every home or summer cottage.

Prefabricated fireplaces offer versatility and are exiting additions to home remodeling plans. At a fraction of the cost of a masonry fireplace, they can be used as the focal point in a room.

There's a fireplace for every remodeling scheme, from the rustic camp setting to the modern contemporary decor. They add a decorative touch to satisfy even the most discriminating homeowner.

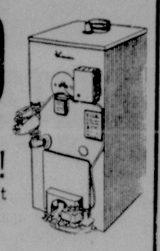

There is a rising trends in installations of fireplaces in new homes. Although accurate statistics are not available, this trend has also been evident in installations in older homes. While "do-it-yourself" has become a popular household word, the factory-built fireplace for home remodeling is becoming one of the most popular means of adding an unusual touch of charm to a room. Any handyman can install a prefabricated fireplace in from just a few hours to less than a day.

For example, the popular prefabricated Uni-built Fireplace is now available in five decorator designed models. Low cost and modern styling are features of each new model.

Several of these beautifully styled and functional Uni-built Fireplaces are finished in vitreous enamel with a selection of decorator colors colors. Other models are prime coated and can be painted any color to acent or harmonize with the room decor.

All fireplaces are quickly and easily installed, offering to the economy-minded houseowner a pleasant weekend "do-it-your-self" project.

'Better Kitchens' Is Improvement Theme

Appliances Are Major Keynote

THESE days millions of families are discovering how to live better. The secret? Remodeling to have "a new home at the old address." Improving the home has a number of advantages now being discovered in one out of every five households countrywide.

Modernizing gives new comfort, new convenience, new pleasure and, most important of all, increases property value of many out-of-date houses.

Sound, sensible home improvement increases value well beyond the cost of the improvement. For that reason remodeling becomes an investment rather than an expense and is like "putting money in the bank."

Most families have their pet fix-up project.

Here's a quick rundown of some of the most popular: A remodeled kitchen is the favorite of homemakers everywhere who want new appliances to relieve the work load. Modern cabinets, lighting, new walls, flooring and ceilings are wanted to provide cheery surroundings in the "household center". New rooms are needed too, (from additional baths to converting the attic or basement, to adding on to the present structure.)

In addition to these, there are many more popular modernizing projects. Such things as swimming pools, breezeways, new heating and cooling equipment, additional storage sapce, wall paneling, wall papering and others to fit everyone's budget. All are guaranteed to make the home a better place in which to live.

The great need is to take care of growing families, give proper room for children's activities, for dad and mom to relax at day's end, for the whole family to live together in greater comfort.

Exterior face lifting (and I don't mean adding a TV antenna). Modern, up-to-date families think of outside remodeling as well as making the home inside more comfortable. Outside fix-up can range from a new paint job to residing to turning an old-fashion porch into a sun room.

Here's important news. Home improvement financing is now readily obtainable at low rates. Improving your home today is as easy as buying a new car or financing a luxury vacation. For example, most homeowners can obtain sums up to $10,000 and repay over 20 years time under a government insured program. You can borrow lesser amounts, of course.

See your local building materials dealer or a finance institution in your community for more information on how you can remodel today, live better right where you are, and pay for job in convenient monthly installments.

REMODEL YOUR KITCHEN with modern free-standing appliances. New-for-'62 ranges, refrigerators and other major appliances have a square built-in design that lends a custom-styled look and extra space to any kitchen. Here, even the combination refrigerator-freezer takes on a built-in look when installed between counters.

CEILING TILES are installed without nailing or stapling. Tiles slip into place with new "Clip-Strip" system.

Advantages Of Baseboard Heat

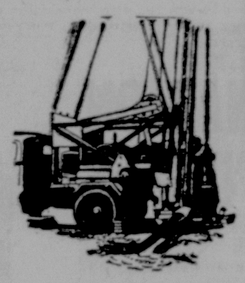

ONE of the advantages of baseboard heating is that it can be installed in place of the existing baseboard in any house. This means that the placing of chairs, sofas, tables and all other room furnishings is in no way hindered by the location of the heating outlets.

With hydronic (circulating hot water) baseboard heating, too, says the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, radian heat effectively and economically warms every inch of a room, cold wall and window areas included. There are no drafts, hot or cold.

Just an hours work on your small Plumbing Problems can save you time and money later . . .

Novel Sunken Patio Improves Basement Plan

UNCLUTTERED ELEGANCE—This handsome ranch has an expansion feature which adds, piecemeal if desired, the garage and its connecting service area. The basic house is 1,343 square feet. A sunken rear patio opens the basement to additional living area.

A novel innovation in traditional one-story design gives this elegant little ranch the same popular characteristic as the new bi-level design — more living area at little extra cost.

Simply by excavating outside the rear foundation wall, architect Samuel Paul has opened a 32-foot long basement recreation room plus a private study to an airy and attractive outdoor sunken patio. The result is a comfortable and livable expanse of what ordinarily would be gloomy basement space.

This house, design J-4 in the House of the Week series, also has an expansion plan which can be done piece-meal, enlarging it from a basic 1,343 square foot home to almost half again its size.

The basic house, however, contains as many features as most families require — four bedrooms, one and one half baths, a 12 foot by 19 foot living room and a slightly larger combination kitchen-dining-family room. Packaging all this in 1,343 square feet, plus the full basement, is a remarkable achievement in itself. Its modest dimensions are 45 feet 8 inches by 39 feet 6 inches.

Architect Paul's expansion plan would add a one or two-car garage, a workroom (OR MAID'S ROOM(, A SECOND FULL BATH AND A LAUNDRY. The original laundry space in the basement would then become additional storage area.

The entire expansion doesn't have to be done at one time. The garage could be built first, for example, with the connecting service area no more than a breezeway.

When the expansion is completed, a trellis can be built over the dining terrace and the terrace itself later expanded into a large rear patio including a swimming pool. A front patio could be added at this time also, producing an abundance of out-door facilities at ground level, not to mention the sunken patio.

The completed expansion would increase the width of the house by either 29 foot 4 inches with a one-car garage or 39 foot 4 inches with a two-car garage.

Additional Details

The sunken flagstone patio at the rear of this house, which makes the basement area delightfully useable, is done at hardly any extra cost. The architect merely replaced the foundation wall with a frame wall, abundant in floor to ceiling windows.

The change in level between the sunken patio and normal grade can be turned to additional advantage with an attractive rock garden and a gentle run of stone steps from one level to the other.

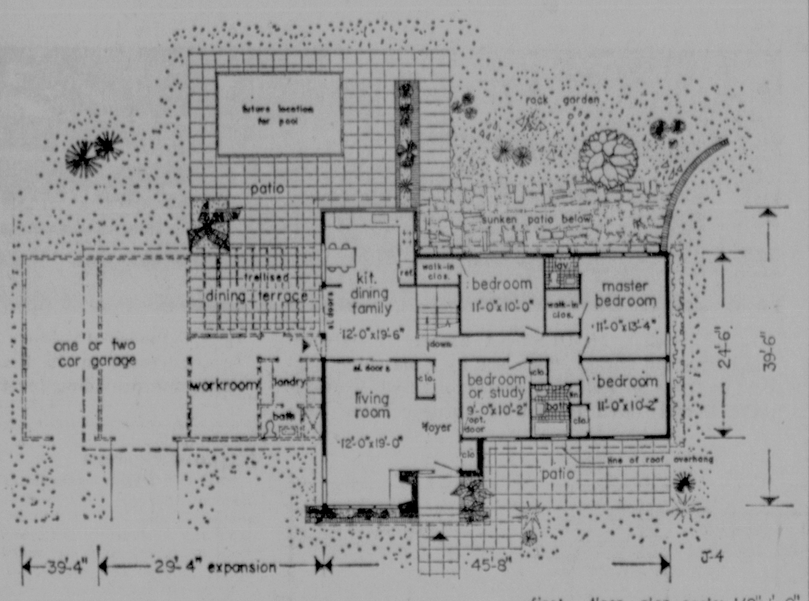

The portion beneath the expansion section is unexcavated, of course. But the basement of the basic house is fully developed with three large rooms in addition to the recreation room, laundry, full bath, heater and storage room.

A space-saving double-run stair, convenient to both the kitchen and living room, connects the basement with the first floor.

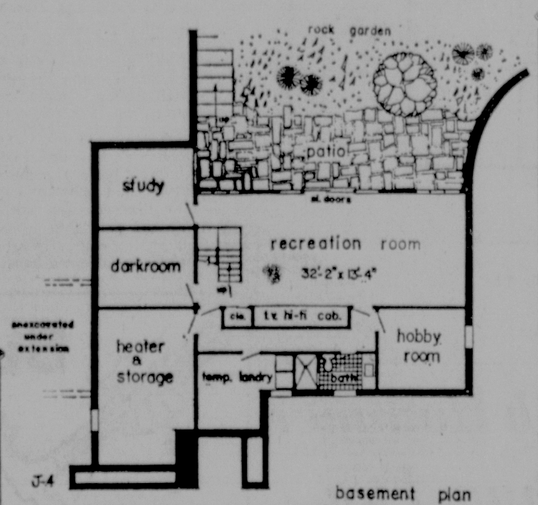

The first floor contains a neat optional feature in that the front bedroom, located next to the foyer, could easily serve as a den or library. If this is done, architect Paul suggests a door adjacent to the entry.

An eye-catcher in the living room is the handsome brick fireplace, the backside of which forms one wall of the sheltered front entry. Sliding doors separate the living room from the multipurpose family kitchen, and glass doors lead from the kitchen to the dining terrace.

The uncluttered exterior of this house is of horizontal wood siding accented with brick veneer and the striking brick chimney.

Automatic Tackers Aid In Fixing-Up

BUILDING a family room in the basement? Finishing off an add-on room? Insulating your attic? You can take a lot of work out of these projects by using an automatic tacker.

Fastening the insulation to the studs, attaching vapor barrier materials, putting up ceiling tile, and staple-nailing wall plankings to the furring strips are jobs made easy with an all-purpose tacker like the Duo-Fast CT-859 model.

Such a tacker saves you all the work of securing a nail; setting it, and then driving it in with a hammer. Instead, you just position th tacker, squeeze the handle — zip — in goes the tight-gripping staple. And, your other hand is free to hold your material in position.

Many home improvement projects never are started because of the amount of time and work involved. A time-saver and work-saver, like an automatic staple tacker, helps to get things under way and completed.

HYDROCORD backing makes it possible to install vinyl sheet flooring in basements and on-ground level concrete slabs. This special backing resists the harmful effects of alkali moisture.

'Optimum Day' Is Basis For Air Conditioning Efficiency

ON A day when you awaken feeling at peace with the world — when you want to 'get at' things you've been putting off and see others around you abuzz with activity — it's not a big dose of vitamins — it's the weather!

Chances are that the temperature is about 70 degrees . . . the humidity about 50 percent — and there is a gentle stirring of clean air. Nature is giving a demonstration of the climate conditions which suit humans best.

Scientists and researchers call this an "optimum day." Insurance statistics and court records show that on such days there are fewer accidents, fewer deaths and fewer serious arguments. In general, people do better jobs and feel better.

While homeowners may not have reduced this to such simple terms when considering an air conditioning system, actually this is the secret for specifying the comfort conditions you want, says the Janitrol Heating and Air Conditioning Division, Midland-Ross Corporation.

There are important factors to the homeowner to consider when planning a program of air conditioning. Be sure to check the following points carefully:

Temperature and humidity should be held within the comfort zone: 70-78 degrees as far as temperature is concerned and 30-35 percent relative humidity. Heat gain calculations are necessary to determine proper size of the mechanical equipment.

Provide air circulation in all rooms so that cool air will not stratify on the floor. Your dealer will design an adequate distribution and return air system so no perceptible air movement will impinge on occupants and cause discomfort.

Even though windows remain closed for summer cooling, a constant supply of fresh air can be provided with a dampering arrangement which brings in outside air, filters it, cools it, and dehumidifies it before circulating it through the house.

For those suffering from asthma, hayfever, or snus ailments or for dust-free living, you can have country-fresh air by including an electrostatic filtering device which removes cigarette smoke, pollen and other airborne junk.

Remember that the home has both relaxing areas and working areas. Cooler temperatures are important in the working areas because physical activity generates heat. Warmer temperatures in relaxing areas prevent chills while sitting still. Your dealer can provide for this either by balancing the flow of air to the various rooms or by installing electronic zone controls.

Have an expert check your home for conditions which might put unnecessary burdens on the performance and economy of the air cooling system. He might suggest such things as exhaust fans in the kitchen and bathroom to eliminate humidity and heat from cooking and bathing operations, and in the laundry.

Build A Convenient Rack For Tools In Basement

IT'S A sure bet — if you're a do-it-yourself hobbyist — that you have a work bench, but you may not have as an efficient arrangement for storing tools.

So here's a suggestion: Build a tool rack to put on the wall above your work bench. Make it with a sheet of perforated hardboard. Fasten it with wood screws to a framework of one-by-two lumber.

You'll find a wide variety of fixtures and hangers at your building materials dealer's. Insert these fixtures into the perforations in the hardboard and hang your tools on them.

Then your tools all will be easy to see — and easy to reach.

Here are some suggestions that will help you add efficient space to your garage without making it any larger:

Cover interior walls with perforated hardboard, so that tools can be hung instead of piling them in a corner. Build wall cabinets for storage of small objects; corner cabinets to hold garden and lawn equipment and work clothes and a drop-leaf work table so you can lower it against the wall when it's not in use.

Plan a storage platform suspended from the ceiling to hold screens, storm windows, hardboard panels and other large flat objects.

Too Large An Old House Can Earn A Nice Income

Couples in their 50's, with "too much house" and retirement coming along, could transform part of their home into a fine apartment. This would give them a number of advantages, according to John Concord, housing expert of Masonite Corporation:

They can remain in the old, familiar neighborhood among friends and associations that have become part of their lives.

They can increase their income from the apartment's rental and gain tax deductions for the expense of maintaining rented property.

They can live more comfortably, perhaps on the ground floor, leaving the stair climbing for the renters.

In many homes, an attic or basement are the obvious locations for such an apartment. It's attractiveness is of prime importance, as deluxe apartments always are in demand. A premium remodeling usually costs little more than a less attractive conversion, and the apartment will bring higher rent.

For instance, use of wood-grain finished hardboard paneling, such as made by Masonite Corporation, gives rooms a luxurious appearance.

These wood grained hardwood panels are easy to work with. In fact, they are easily installed by a handy man, further reducing remodeling costs. Since they are factory-finished, on-the-job decorating is eliminated and maintenance expense greatly reduced.

Since single folk or young couples are likeliest renters of such apartments, it is advisable to properly furnish the rooms; selecting furniture that fits the general decorative scheme.

Essentials like chairs, tables, lamps, rugs and accessories make a homelike atmosphere and bring a better choice of applicants from which to select a renter and will appreciably reduce tennant turnover.

Closet storage facilities can be stretched and made attractive by covering one or more walls with Peg-Board panels. Another strategic spot for this versatile paneling is on the inside of doors. Shelves on brackets and hooks for hanging, transform it into a real storage have.

Should the conversion leave a shortage of closets, it is relatively simple to make a storage wall using lumber framing and attractive hardboard panels for sides and doors.

Modern Breezeway Gives Economy House A Big Look

FROM THE curb, this house looks like the type couples on a tight home buying budget are forced to pass by with a sigh. But take another look.

A covered breezeway, cleverly and inexpensively constructed, makes the house appear much larger than its 1,257 square feet of living area actually permits—besides giving the home one of the best integrated outdoor play areas ever to appear in the House of the Week series.

It is design B-94 by architect Rudolph A. Matern.

A window on the closed face of the breezeway, matching the other two front windows, makes the breezeway appear from the outside to be part of the house proper; and the roof extending over the breezeway makes it look as though the house adjoins the garage.

In addition, the house has an expansion plan for two more large bedrooms upstairs, plus a full bath and a study—a total of 743 additional square feet. Unlike most one and one-half story homes, this would have full-height ceilings all the way around. Matern does this by placing both rooms to the rear and taking full advantage of a 34-foot dormer.

The basic house has two bedrooms and one and one-half baths on the first floor, plus a large living room with a log burning fireplace, separate dining room, a family room which also could serve as a breakfast room, a well designed kitchen and a convenient laundry room.

A large reception foyer assures good traffic circulation, eliminating the nuisance of persons passing through the living room to get in and out of the house. Two other outside entrances—one at the family room and a service entrance next to the kitchen—further eliminate needless crisscrossing of rooms by children, delivery men and other such day to day traffic.

The overall width of the house, including the breezeway and garage, is 71 feet 1 inches—the house proper is 48 feet 7 inches and the breezeway-garage 22 feet 6 inches. The depth is 27 feet 6 inches.

Additional Details

With its three closed sides and roof, the breezeway of this house becomes practically as intimate and private as an actual room. It is 27 feet long, 10 feet wide, and has an L-shaped rear portion to provide a terrace to the family room.

It is an example of what architects call proper design of space, providing far more function than the same amount of space stuck out in the back yard. In total area, the breezeway ell occupies 316 square feet—more than the living room and foyer combined, and every inch of it functional.

The garage has a back entrance, making the storage closets easily accessible for lawn furniture, barbecue gear and such. Also, note that both the front entrance and the service entrance are covered.

Wood shingles are specified for the exterior of the house, with brick veneer around the living room. Architect Matern also suggests a fence and planter boxes to accentuate the width of the house, and a driveway lamp and weathervane to add to its early American flavor.

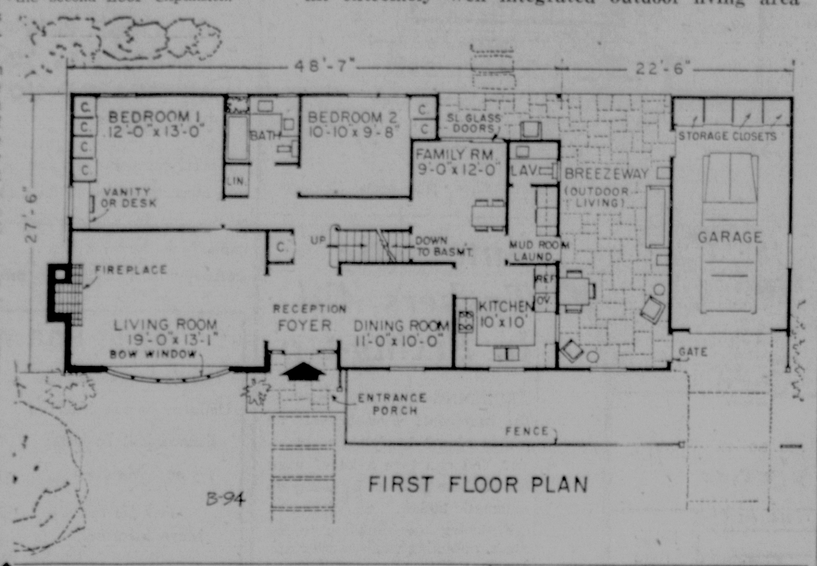

Another unusual feature of this house is the location of the kitchen—at the front of the house. From its U-shaped work area, mother can supervise activities in the family room, breezeway and front yard.

The lavatory likewise is well placed, accessible to the informal indoor areas as well as the outdoor play areas. The main bath (note the double sink and the corner planter) is equally accessible to the formal entertaining areas as well as the two bedrooms.

The upstairs bathroom is just as luxurious, with double sink and both tub and stall shower; and the closet space upstairs is exceptional. The eight feet 4 inches by 10 feet study, or dressing room, is another noteworthy feature in the second floor expansion.

DECEPTIVELY MODEST—A breezeway between the house and garage, disguised by a matching window in front as well as a continuous roof, provides an extremely well integrated outdoor living area for this modest 1½-story house. The house contains two bedrooms on the first floor with a second floor expansion providing for two more.

Expand System

ONE OF THE advantages of modern hydronic (hot water) heating is that it is easy to expand the system to include a room or rooms that are added to the house. The smaller diameter piping through which hot water is circulated can be run through walls and floors without major structural changes. Usually the boiler has sufficient capacity to handle the additiona load, says the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau.

WATERPROOF tile board cement, waterproof linoleum cement or a contact bond adhesive can be used to fasten pressed wood-type hardboard panels to walls. Acoustical-type cements, however, will not form an adequate bond.

Attract Attention

IF YOU have an authentic antique or other treasured piece of furniture, paint color can help you to make it more prominent and draw the attention of all who enter the room. How? Paint the wall behind the piece a color different from the other walls, a color that contrasts sharply with the color of the furniture. Some decorators even paint just the area behind and above the piece to make it the focus of all eyes.

DRIP-dry materials—in clothes, bedspreads, table linen, curtains and the like—are a real boon to homemakers . . . but there's the problem of sloppiness and unsightliness of that drip-drip-drip in laundries, bathrooms and kitchens.

TAMP soil gently with the hoe blade after sowing seeds in rows. You'll provide close contact between soil and seeds; get flower or vegetable seeds off to a far stronger start.

IF BASEMENT is flooded stay out of it. Only a few inches of water may reach the furnace ignition line introducing enough electrical current in the water to electrocute you.

TURN off the main supply line valve if a leak is serious, or when you can't locate specific point of leakage. In many cases, more water may be leaking than is apparent.

Build Your Yard With Hammer And Nails For Maximum Fun

WHAT? No green thumb? Try the hammer and nails method of landscaping.

Many of today's most distinguished gardens are created with lumber, while the traditional flower bed and swath of green lawn becomes more and more limited.

The switch, according to Barbara Fealy, OSLA, prominent landscape architect of Portland, Oregon, results from a re-evaluation of the yard. While our forebears wanted a park-like year to look at, the modern family needs a garden designed for living as well as looking.

When planning a livable yard for your home, it's wise to begin with paper and pencil, advises the landscape architect. Jot down all the things you need and want for your yard beginning with uses, then noting methods of achieving those end uses.

For example, when creating an outdoor living area for your garden, perhaps you find privacy a problem. In that case, you should begin your yard development with a fence to provide your home with the needed sanctity. Don't fear using a high estate type of fence, for they can be utterly charming with the right kind of design.

One idea is to use a series of overlapping screens for the fence to avoid the straight-lined rigidity of most perimeter fences. The screens can be built with 1x2 strips of western red cedar spaced a quarter inch apart to give the fence a delightfully airy appearance. The 1x2s are nailed to a frame of 2x4s, using cedar 4x4s as posts.

A pattern of vertical louvers is another excellent design for the high fence. The louvers are simply cedar 1x6s set vertically at a 45 degree angle between a top and bottom 2x6 rail. It's an easy style to build and is, again, surprisingly open and airy in effect.

The privacy fence, whatever its style, will be the more lovely if it is used as a backdrop or foil for greens massed at its base. With little research into the matter, shrubs that require little care and are slow-growing can be found for the fence line.

Another good trick for blending the fence into the landscaping and making it more lovely, according to Landscape Architect Fealy, is to let the cedar weather out instead of painting or staining it. In a season or so, the fence will become a magnificent silver shade which compliments perfectly the greens and flowers in your garden. Miss Fealy also suggests that, to gain textural interest, rough-sawn cedar be specified for the fence rather than surfaced boards.

Once the privacy problem has been solved, the yard developemnt can continue, little by little as time and budget permit. A handsome wood patio for comfortable outdoor lounging is generally the second most-needed item on the list. This can be attached to the house in deck style or set in a corner of the yard where, with the addition of a roof or arbor-like canopy, it becomes a summer house or gazebo.

Pergolas, garden benches, and tool houses are other structures to consider adding to your yard. Each will contribute added livability and put a plus mark on the beauty side.

Larger's Darker

WHEN you are selecting a paint color for your walls, remember that any color looks darker on a large area than on a small one. This is especially true when you are choosing from a small paint chip or color card. For that reason it is wise to pick a color a bit lighter than the one that seems to be just right on the sample.

TODAY, millions of American homeowners, who are planning to modernize their homes are operating their up-to-date electrical appliances with wiring which was out of date and insufficient even five years ago.

How Much Varnish?

VARNISH will cover about 600 square feet of unfinished hard wood flooring per gallon. Over previously varnished floors, a gallon will cover about 650 square feet. To find out how much varnish you need for a floor, multiply its length times its width to get the number of square feet to be covered. Then divide this figure by the coverage mentioned above.

PLANT small groups of bulbs in an oval pattern for best effect. Prepare soil by spading it up, breaking clumps, then raking it smooth.

Bathroom Shower Is An Easy Job

DID you know that your showerless bathrooms can have this desirable bathing facility without a remodeling job?

The apparent necessity of ripping out walls and flooring has dissuaded many homeowners from making needed improvements in bathrooms.

Actually, says the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau, a bathtub can be altered to a modern tub-shower combination simply by piping directly up from the bathtub spout (a special one, of course). No installation in the wall itself is necessary.

A shower can thus be added regardless of the type or age of the bathtub. The chrome-plated pipe and shower head are securely bracketed to the wall. The valve control to divert water to the shower head is, conventionally, an integral part of the tub spout.

This is certainly the most economical way to have a tub-shower combination. No remodeling at all is necessary, and any experienced plumbing contractor can guarantee a satisfactory job.

Older homes without showers can economically have bathrooms more up-to-date, and newer homes cheated of this convenience by an overly thrifty builder can likewise offer more comfort and convenience to the family.

After all, no bathing facility is complete without both a tub and shower bath.

Only With Oil, Or Alkyd

LAMBSWOOL rollers should be used only with oil or alkyd based paints and not with water-thinned paints, popularly known as latex. Water makes the wool curl and mat, thus causing a mottled or pebbly effect on the wall. Rollers made of synthetic fibers are best for latexes.

Innovation Of Center Gallery Key To Well-Zoned Split

STRIKING SPLIT—An unusual roof design, attractive entrance and side windows provide a handsome exterior for this side-to-side split. The house contains 10 rooms, including four bedrooms, three full baths and double garage in 1,856 square feet of living area.

A NEAT innovation in traditional split level design, based on an interesting and functional entrance gallery, enabled architect Samuel Paul to score a remarkable achievement in this house.

He has packaged four bedrooms, three full baths and an impressive exterior in 1,477 square feet of basic house — which has, in addition, expansion space for a large fifth bedroom or den.

Paul calls the house the Juliet. It is design B-87 in the House of the Week series.

The gallery, indented both front and rear from the rest of the house, serves as an enrance foyer in front and a glass-walled breakfast area in back. A double closet separates the two.

The indention creates a covered porch (one of two) in the rear, and in front results in a striking entrance portico one and a half stories high.

The bonus space in this house — a usable attic which may be finished at some later date — is another benefit of the fallery idea. The 15 feet by 12 feet six inches room results by simply carrying the higher bedroom roof across the gallery.

An equally important effect of the gallery, if not more important, is that is makes for excellent zoning. Living, sleeping and informal areas are clearly separated to a degree not usually found in split level homes. At the same time, the breakfast area serves as a connecting link between the kitchen, porch, playroom and two patios, integrating the entire rear of the house into a large informal living area encompassing two levels.

From the exterior, Paul's deft use of brick veneer transforms B-87 from a simple wood frame house to one of solid, suburban character. Its shape also facilitates economical construction: only 10,400 board feet of framing lumber are required.

Dimensions of the house are 65 feet eight inches wide by 23 feet deep on the living room side and 25 feet 10 inches deep on the bedroom side. Paul suggests a lot of 80 feet by 100 feet.

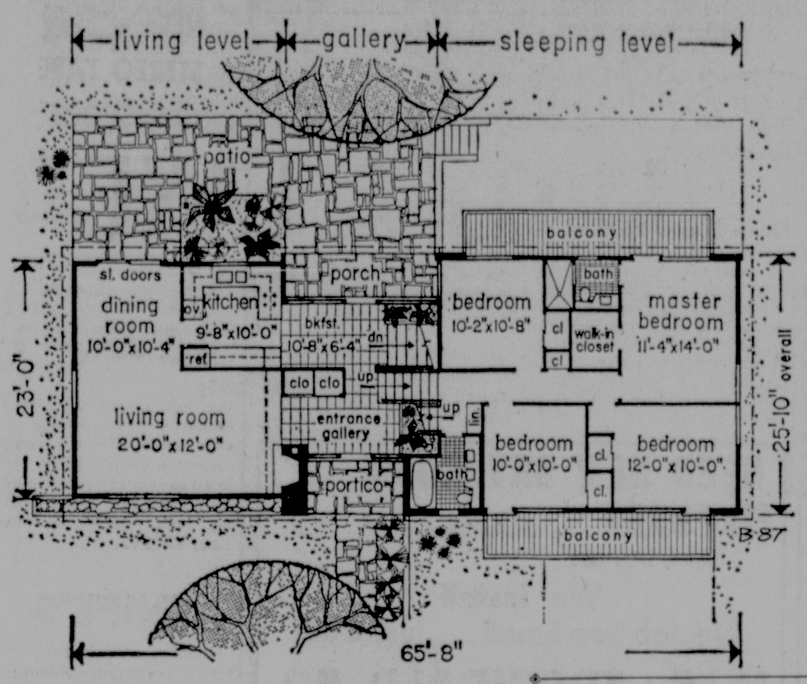

Additional Details

Two balconies, on the front and back of the bedroom level, provide a touch of elegance at only incidental extra cost. They are built simply by overhanging the floor joists. Besides offering outdoor living on an upper level, they also provide protection from the weather below — over the garage door and screened porch. If desired, the walls and floor of the front balcony can be eliminated and a decorative trellis thus formed.

A high cathedral ceiling in the living and dining rooms provides another accent of glamor, as well as economy. A combined planter and lighting cove, passing in front of the brick fireplace and extending the full width of the living room, provides a subtle transition from the eight feet high gallery to the 10 feet high living room.

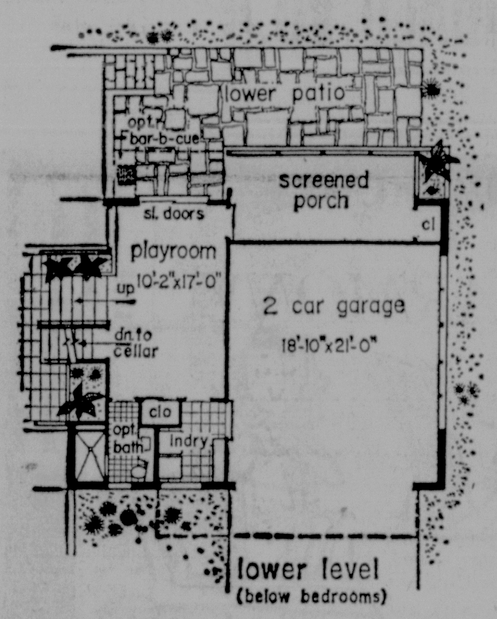

All three full bathrooms in this house are well placed and of good size. The front bath has a built-in double vanity and a recessed tub, and both the master bath and the bath on the playroom level (an optional feature) have large-size tile stall showers.

Large patios on two levels, plus a screened porch on the lower level, provide excellent outdoor living features.

Zone Heating Is The Best

TO get maximum comfort throughout the house, zone the heating system so that each section will get the heat it needs. With a hydronic (hot water) heating system, says the Plumbing-Bureau, this is easy and inexpensive.

Decide on the number of heating zones you want, then have a heating contractor install separate controls for each zone. The boiler then supplies heat only as needed in any area.

Flooring Makes Ideal Wall Paneling Anywhere in House

NO ONE knows the name of the ingenious architect who first used ordinary Douglas fir flooring as wall paneling. But architects and designers in every state have adopted the idea with gusto, and silently praise him.

Because flooring has been carefully selected and is tongue-and-groove patterned, it is ideal for wall use. It is easy to install and the ordinary carpenter or handyman has no trouble toe-nailing into the tongue so the next board hides the nails.

Flooring can be finished to a sleek smoothness which can take on the beautiful characteristics of the wood. By using clear plastics or lacquer, the coloring and grain of the woods can be retained and these are the two features which make wood so attractive as a wall covering.

Douglas fir has a richness in tone which comes in part from the slight reddish tinge which shades into the golden coloring of the wood. Another popular flooring used widely for wall paneling is west coast hemlock which has a sort of champagne coloring when finished with clear plastic. Delicate shades of both of these woods are brought out more richly if a sealer coat is first applied and rubbed with sandpaper after thorough drying and before the clear plastic coatings are applied.

Ranch Features Efficiency Plus Rustic Warmth

Features Old-Fasnion Front Porch

RUSTIC warmth, emphasized by a contemporary version of the old-fashioned front porch, characterizes this up-to-date three bedroom ranch.

Its suburban charm doesn't end at the threshold, either. The interior design, practical and convenient in every way, features a sunken living room which extends beyond the rear walls of the house and has windows on three sides. It also has a homey, floor-to-ceiling stone fireplace separating it from the entrance foyer.

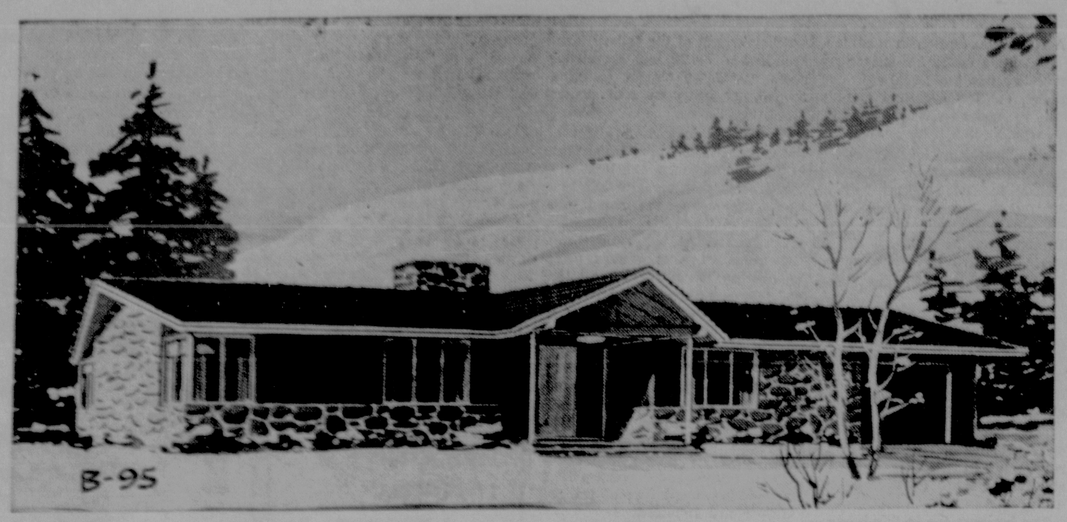

Designer of House of the Week B-95 is architect Samuel Paul. The house contains a modest 1,315 square feet of living area in overall dimensions of 35 feet deep and 62 feet three inches wide. Paul suggests a 75 feet by 100 feet lot to take full advantage of the exterior features.

Its floor plan is a well ordered arrangement of living room, combination kitchen-dining room, family room, three bedrooms, entry foyer, one full bath, a lavatory, washroom, one-car garage and partial cellar.

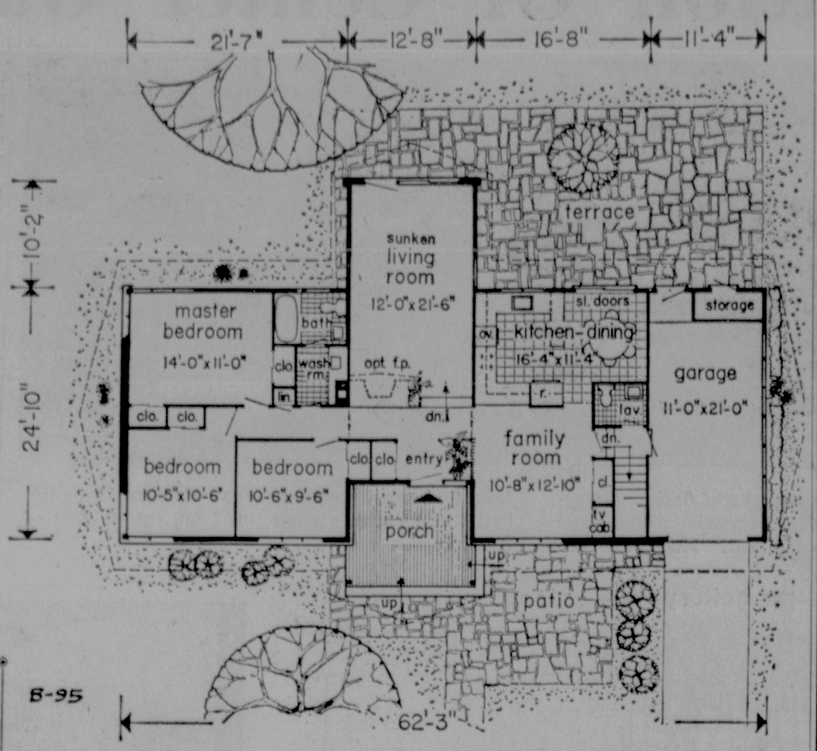

The exterior is a handsome blend of stone veneer and wood siding with an intersecting roof line, in the shape of a cross, which further emphasizes its rustic character. While the shape of the house is unusual, it consists of simple rectangular forms which permit a direct and simple framing system to be used in construction.

The effect of the front-to-rear roof gable is even more striking inside. It allows a battened cathedral ceiling to flow through the house unobstructed, producing an unusual sense of spaciousness. To preserve the effect, the closets in the entry (which also serve as a divider) don't extend all the way up to the ceiling.

The informal area—most used portion of any modern home — likewise is well planned for efficient, relaxed living. An especially, fine feature is the lavatory, convenient not only to the family room-kitchen area but to the outdoors as well.

PLEASINGLY RUSTIC—A contemporary version of the old-fashioned front porch, plus an interesting roof, gives this up-to-date three bedroom ranch an air of rustic charm. The house contains 1,315 square feet in dimensions of 62' 3" wide by 35' deep. Interior features a sunken living room, cathedral ceiling.

Additional Details

The living room fireplace, as desirable as it is for its homey effect, is offered as an optional feature by architect Paul who realizes a person's desires don't always conform to the family housing budget.

Should you decide in favor of the budget, an ornamental rail would be substituted as a divider in the foyer, producing a balcony two steps above the sunken living room. If the fireplace is constructed, however, the boiler flue would be placed within the chimney and thus the vanity in the wash room would be lengthened considerably.

The wash room, incidentally, deserves further attention. For reasons of plumbing economy, it couldn't be placed in a better place. Far from being a duplication of the adjoining bathroom facilities, this innovation eases the morning rush those of us who have lived in one-bathroom houses are familiar with, and in addition provides a handy and attractive powder room for guests.

The kitchen-dining area of this house is ideally laid out. The step-saving U-shaped kitchen (with sink overlooking the terrace for excellent supervision) is separated from the dining area by hanging cabinets. Sliding glass doors lead to the large, flagstone rear terrace. The terace also is accessible from the living room and the garage, making it an excellent relaxing area you'll appreciate more in the warmer weather.

The front porch—a rarity nowadays—can be appreciated in all kinds of weather. It provides the best of all covered entrances in rain or snow, and in warm or snow, and in warm weather is good for just sitting—like grandpa used to do. If nothing else though, in combination with the front patio the porch serves as a pleasing and gracious entrance.

New Dressing Room With Plastic Panel

FOR owners of older homes who undertake bathroom remodeling, a simple method of creating a dressing room can be accomplished by installing dividers of lightweight sliding panels of modern translucent plastics, suggest designers at the Alsynite Division of Reichhold Chemicals.

When the flat plastic panels are used in small horizontal framing, an Oriental shoji-type effect is achieved. On one side of the sliding panels are all the conventional bathroom fixtures; on the other side — and generally as one enters the room — is the dressing room. A small dressing table, mirror and similar equipment turns the formerly wasted space into a most usable room, permitting privacy in both rooms.

Although framing and erecting a sliding divider is normally a job for professionals, a reasonably experienced do-it-yourselfer can accomplish the same result. The materials, ordinary framing lumber and decorative Alsynite panels, are available at most lumber yards.

Price Alone Is No Criterion For Buying Plant Stock For Garden

DO YOU know a real "bargain" in nursery stock? Or are you influenced by the price appeal primarily?

Not all sales on plants indicate value, and nursery stock should be shopped for as carefully as any other commodity.

Here are some things to check whether a plant is a bargain or not:

SIZE — height and spread of shrubs should be compared with standards set by The American Association of Nurserymen for nursery stock. Every good nurseryman is familiar with these standards and the better nurserymen adhere to them.

In trees and shrubs of all kinds, the smaller sizes cost less for the simple reason they can be grown in less time, require less feeding, pruning, spraying and cultivating. A taxus, for example with a one foot spread and about the same height will cost a lot less than one two-feet wide, for example.

Thus you actually need to compare the actual (not the alleged) measurements of plants to determine whether you are getting a bargain or not.

ROOT SYSTEM — all standard nursery stock is required to have well-developed root systems. Take a deciduous shrub, 1½ to 2-feet in height, it should have a 10-inch root spread; a shrub 6 to 8-feet high, a 20-inch root spread.

A balled and burlapped evergreen with a 2-foot spread should have an 11-inch ball of earth and this ranges up to a 36-inch diameter ball for a plant with 8 to 9 spread. Small trees 6 to 7 feet should have an 18-inch ball; 10 to 12-foot trees, a 26-inch idameter ball.

Nursery stock should be delivered and made available at the proper planting time and planting instructions should be obtained easily.

Remember — low price alone means nothing if not related to quality and size. The higher-priced specimens could be by far the best buys. Trade with the nurserymen you know from experience are reliable.

Bare root trees, for example, should have an adequate root spread, from 12 inches for a ½ to -inch trunk and 5 to 6 feet in height; up to a 38-inch healthy root spread for a 14 to 16-foot tree.

Measure the sizes of the plants offered as bargains and compare.

BRANCHING — a well-branched tree or shrub can be many times as valuable as a slender "whip" with few or no branches. Take a small upright tree like a dogwood, for example, at 4 to 5 feet high, it should have 5 or more branches; at 6 to 8 feet, 6 or more branches.

HEALTH AND VIGOR — freshly dug, or properly refrigerated and packaged nursery stock takes hold more quickly, looks better, gets established more easily when transplanted on your property.

GUARANTEES — many nursery firms have been long established and their future depends on treating you, the customer.

SET strawberry plants so that crown is even with soil level. If it is higher, roots dry out; if lower, crown may smother and the plant die. Firm soil around roots; water plant.

Window Channels

IT IS NOT a good idea to paint the channel in which the window sash moves up and down because the wondows may stick shut. After a number of coats have been applied to the channel, the space will become narrowed and make it difficult to move the window. To protect the wood of the channel against moisture and rot, brush on a coat of boiled linseed oil or a penetrating sealer.

Deep Down Finish

FOR A floor finish that will wear and wear and require very little upkeep, many experts recommend a penetrating floor finish. This can be applied only to bare wood, new floors or floors from which the old finish has been removed with a power sander. The finish penetrates the fibers of the wood, binds them together and strengthens them. There is no film left on the surface to be abraded or scratched. This type finish wears away only as the wood itself wears away.

IF A backup in a waste line is the problem, don't run water from any part of the house until you're sure it won't add to the backup.

Grand Entry Foyer Graces Efficient Split Home

CORDIAL AND FUNCTIONAL—The striking exterior entrance of this house is matched by this equally gracious entry foyer. It contains 66 square feet, and funnels traffic efficiently to all levels of the side-to-side split. Stairs to living room are more than six feet wide, accented by wrought iron railings.

STRIKING AND NEAT—Unusual split lvel, with four bedrooms and three full baths in 1,477 square feet, features a center gallery which makes for excellent zoning as well as providing expansion opportunity for a fifth bedroom or den. Note dramatic one and one-half story entrance portico.

FLOOR PLANS—There are five exterior entrances to this house which, together with an efficient interior floor plan, assure good traffic circulation. Note how the entry foyer funnels traffic to all sections of the house. Dimensions are 35' deep by 52'1 0" wide containing 1,856 square feet of living area.

Marks A Family That Is Gracious And Hospitable

By Jules Loh

DURING this season, when folks are dropping by more frequently than usual, the necessity of a gracious entry foyer is easily apparent.

But this need doesn't vanish when the egg nog bowl is empty, because a well-designed foyer serves a greater function than merely as a pleasant reception hall for guests, as important as that is.

Its main purpose is to assure what architects call good circulation—the easy and unobtrusive flow of traffic in and out of the house and from one room to another. Ideally, you never should have to go through a third room. Good circulation is a hallmark of good design, one of the factors that adds value to your home.

The foyer of this home serves both functions nobly.

Its 66 square feet provide plenty of room not only for a cordial reception but also for those group farewells that inevitably leave a less adequate foyer in hopeless congestion. And the coat closets (extra large) are away from the entrance, eliminating that front door scramble that always adds to the confusion.

Moreover, the foyer efficiently funnels traffic to all the levels of this side-to-side split, as well as to the clearly defined formal entertaining area, informal relaxing area and housekeeping area.

Designer of this attractive and well-ordered four-bedroom home is architect Rudolph A. Matern. It is B-98 in the House of the Week series.

Its efficiency doesn't end at the foyer, by any means. In fact, Matern's good design has resulted in packaging 10 rooms, a double garage, three baths and a long list of other luxuries in a neat 35 feet by 52 feet 10 inches perimeter containing 1,385 square feet on the bedroom and living levels and 471 sqquare feet of living area on the entrance level.

Additional Details

A fireplace at one end, a glamorous entry at the other and a huge bow window in between provide uncommon grandeur to the 286 square foot expanse of this handsome living room. The foyer steps are more than six feet wide, accented by wrought iron railings which give the effect of a balcony.

The living room sweeps around into the dining room and out onto one of two terraces, adding to the sense of spaciousness. Sliding glass doors are used as entrys to both terraces, incidentally.

Another balcony separates the informal area from the kitchen, and makes an excellent place for the breakfast table. It also enhances supervision of the family room by the housewife.

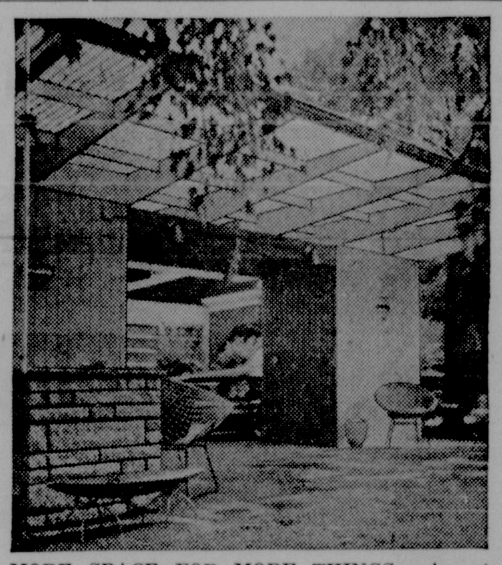

The kitchen is well designed with plenty of counter space, a built in range, wall oven and double sink. Large windows over the sink allow excellent vision of the backyard and terrace, besides providing plenty of sunlight.

A full bath, with stall shower, is well placed in the laundry alcove, handy to the family room, kitchen, outdoors and garage; and if the basement were finished off with a recreation room, it would be convenient to that too.

The main bath upstairs is within a few steps of all four bedrooms, though the master bedroom has its own full bath with an extra large vanity. The main bath, you will notice, has a double lavatory and recessed tub.

Though the dimensions of this house make it adaptable to most lots, architect Matern provides an alternate design of the garage should the lot be too narrow for the side entry shown. A slight modification, which he provides in his working drawings, would permit the garage door to be located in front.

The exterior of this house is of brick veneer, but its most unusual exterior features are the handsome roof design, the brick columns and the side windows which give the main entrance added charm.

MORE SPACE FOR MORE THINGS—An attached garage, converted to a handsome carport and patio, creates more space for storage of lawn tools, children's playthings and unused-household items. It also provides protection for the family car, and extends into the yard for more outdoor living room. Here, handsome transluscent fiberglass panels are used dramatically and effectively to complete the carport and patio transformation.

Chandeliers Make A Real Comeback . . .

YOUR 'Eye-Q" is high if you look up — not down. The fashion trend for residential lighting, according to Lightoilier, originators of many firsts in the home furnishing field, is to chandeliers. These symbols of elegance now return as a major focal point in today's home.

Decorators more and more favor the chandelier as a basic decorative theme for a distinctively designed room.

Luxurious embellishment is the keynote in today's decorative schemes. Elegant and elaborate accessories are used to bring flair to even the most moderately appointed interiors. The use of color too is more vibrant. Bold, lavish splashes of red and blue appear where one would least expect to find them.

To meet this decorative trent, Lightolier has introduced a veritable carnival of chandeliers. Pendants and ceiling fixtures now happily combine stylized designs with modern lighting techniques.

A chandelier in modern terms may be a cluster of individual pendants suspended to give dramatic emphasis as well as excellent illumination to an area. Some of these pendants are boldly scaled, others abound in varicolored glass or plastic, and some are formed of wicker in black.

For those whose tastes are frankly on the "champagne level" there are elegant new approaches to crystal chandeliers. These are quite lavish, with the added "plus" of flexible controlled lighting. A light source is concealed within the crystal, and brings out all the brilliance of the sparkling prisms.

Remember when choosing a ceiling fixture that a chandelier's beauty is only part of its role. Consider the character of its lighting and how well it suits the needs and moods of the area it will service.

'Ghost Marks' Haunt Homes

A HOUSE haunted by "ghost marks" is a house haunted by discomfort, especially in Winter.

Ghost marks are wide, shadowy lines of dirt that cling to walls and ceilings between joist and stud spaces. They are caused by dust in warm air drawn to these areas in homes that are improperly insulated.

Mineral wool insulation, properly installed, not only eliminates "ghost marks," but cuts down on fuel bills and makes a house more comfortable by equalizing interior temperatures.

Dishwashers' Large Capacity

TODAY'S automatic dishwashers have a loading capacity of up to 14 place settings.

Some models, reports the Plumbing Heating Cooling information Bureau, have special cycles permitting a full range of water-power action for everything from delicate china to pots and pans.

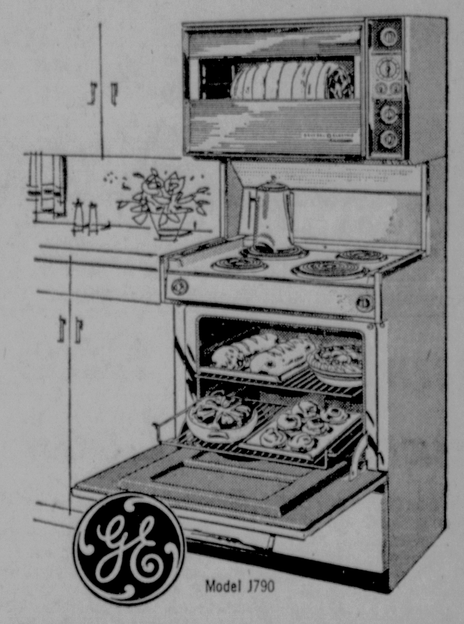

ADVERTISE IN THE DAILY RECORD

Colorful Ceilings

CEILINGS don't have to be white. If your ceiling is high, "lower" it by painting it a darker shade than your wall color. If it is low, "raise" it by using a lighter tint of the wall color. Color harmony can be maintained between adjoining rooms if the ceiling of one room uses the same color as the floor covering in its neighbor.

Laminates Give Luxurious Look

AT less than $200, a new kitchen countertop surfaced with genuine Formica laminated plastic is a "luxury" nearly any homeowner can afford. And it pays dividends in life-time, carefree service.

Sink tops whose old-fashioned surfacing has become worn and faded, or chipped and cracked, can be replaced with a spotless laminate top quickly and economically . . . at less expense, in fact, than many people realize.

A qualified laminated plastic fabricator normally handles the entire job: courtesy price estimation and sampling of Formica colors and patterns, specification of the plumbing fixtures, shop fabrication and complete installation.

Many offer a free planning service to assist in harmonizing countertop colors and styling with overall kitchen decor. Qualified fabricators are generally listed under "Plastics" in the Yellow Pages of the telephone book.

Removal of the bolted-down old top and installation of the new one can usually be done in less than an hour by experienced fabricators. And the total cost for the luxury of an average-size Formica sink top? According to fabricators' estimates, the job can be done for less than $200.

Additional luxuries, such as all-Formica cabinets, wall panels and windowsills can also fit into household renovation plans at surprisingly low cost. Formica 'Vanitories", popular for adding convenience and elegance to bathrooms, can be custom-fabricated for as little as $75.

Wood Admired

NOTICE how people will stop and admire a lovely wood paneled wall. Many times, there is an irresistable impulse to rub or touch the wall.

Built-Ins Will Modernize Old Kitchens

ALTHOUGH built-ins are not new to American homeowners, the trend in recent years is to have more and more items built into a specific area. Special storage areas, book cases, furniture, etc., have been designed for some time as a means of conserving space and eliminating hard-to-clean areas.

The biggest trend of recent years, however, is for more built-ins in the kitchen. Now almost any appliance or gadget can be designed to become a part of the total kitchen.

Why is the kitchen the popular place for built-ins? Here are some of the major considerations. Appearance — built-ins aid the integration of the parts into a total, unbroken line. Livability — with the coming of the kitchen-family room the demand for furniture style cabinetry increased. The blending of the appliances — ovens, range tops, dishwashers and refrigerator-freezers — help maintain this 'living' style kitchen.

Cleanliness — the elimination of cracks, corners and under areas to collect dirt, crumbs and odors is a blessing to housewives who demand freedom for modern day living. Convenience — bringing the oven, refrigerator and freezer up to a workable height has been a boon to housewives. And separating the oven and cook top as well as refrigerator and freezer, to locate them where

A Handyman Can Care For Gutters

IT'S easy for the home handyman to keep up his own gutters and downspouts, says the Roof Drainage Manufacturers Institute.

First, however, check your ladder and all scaffolding equipment. Observe fundamental safety rules when climbing.

Five to ten years can be added to the life of your roof drainage system by cleaning out all debris in spring and fall. While doing that, check for corroded points and spots where paint is flaking off.

Remove dirt and paint with a wire brush and apply metal primer paint to the affected area inside gutters.

Paint a matching coat (or contrasting) onto the outside area to improve the appearance of your home. This also helps extend th life of the roof drainage system.

Acoustical Ceilings Mums TV

TELEVISION may be entertaining to the person who's watching it, but to someone else trying to read or study in another room, it can be a distinct annoyance. This is why acoustical tile ceilings are becoming popular for use in the TV-Family room, say acoustical specialists of the Armstrong Cork Company. Acoustical tiles absorb up to 75 per cent of the noise that strikes the celing, thereby cutting down the amount of noise that is transmitted to other rooms.

Plan Kitchen Scientifically

THERE are three general kitchen plans, says the Plumbing-Heating-Cooling Information Bureau: straight wall or corridor type; L-shaped; and U-shaped.

The three major pieces of equipment in the kitchen are the sink, range, and refrigerator, and it is the arrangement of these in realtion to the wall space that decides the basic plan.

A booklet titled "What You Should Know About Plumbing" gives helpful information on how to plan your kitchen, and explains parts and operation of a household plumbing system. It's available by mail for ten cents from the Bureau, at 35 East Wacker Drive, Chicago 1, Illinois.
